PARK AVE.

To the editor of The Herald: For years, we lived on a quiet little street in town called Water Street. It was kind of narrow, no sidewalks, a few pot holes that we got used to and not much traffic. Il street lights went out, someone would phone in three or four weeks later and the bulbs would be replaced.

We tried to get the town to dead-end the street at Main Street but they said the snow plow could not make its annual run. Well a few years ago, they renamed our street and what was Water Street is now the street was still narrow.

with pot holes and no sidewalks. Last winter, they built a big apartment building on Park Ave. The traffic got heavy so they decided to repair the road last month. They put tar and chips, they call it, "actually it is very round stones", on the steepest hill in Halton Hills.

"IT IS A MESS!" I phoned my councillor and he said he would have a look. He confirmed what I already knew. He said "Shell, it is a mesa"! So now we have a narrow

By Julian Reed, M.P.P. Halton-Burlington In this country, we are heavily dependent upon foreign oil suppliers. However, prices are rising and there is considerable uncertainty about security of future supplies. There has, as you know, been much discussion about possible alternatives. Earlier this year, the Ontario Liberal Party released a study which we had commis-stoned on fuel alcohol. Recently about 200 economists, engineers, scientists, researchers and farmers attended the Canadian National Power Alcohol conference in Winnipeg, Manitoba. Generally it was agreed at the Conference that power alcohol could be of tremendous importance in helping to solve this country's future fuel problems. Although there were industries selected as being particularly suitable for the use of alcohol fuel - specifically ethanol. This can be readily produced by the agriculture industry, and is similar to the spirit made by commercial distilleries from grain. In fact, any crop containing starch or sugar can be used to produce potatoes tespecially cults which are, of course, relatively inexpensive), grains and Jerusalem artichoke. compressed natural gas, electricity and hydrogen. Incidentally, the provincial government has announced the establishment of a policy committee to study the role of energy in agriculture in Ontario to the year 2000 and beyond.
