

Hunter's access key to control - MNR

With "No Hunting" signs popping up all over north Halton in preparation for next month's special deer hunt, government officials are warning that the controlled hunt will not be effective unless most property owners cooperate and allow hunters onto their lands.

At least 50 area residents have recently posted "No Hunting" signs around their properties and many more are expected to take Milton regional Coun. Bill Johnson up on his offer to supply the signs free. Mr. Johnson, the former NDP candidate in Halton-Burlington provincial riding, has handed out 1,000 such signs to help protest the Nov. 3 through 5 deer hunt.

"If hunters don't have widespread access to the land, it will have some effect, I'm afraid," Robyn Mulholland of the ministry of natural resources warned last week.

Miss Mulholland commented that a large majority of north Halton residents seem to be in favor of the hunt, designed to reduce the area's deer population and thus save local crops from roaming herds. The ministry itself has received no complaints or objections, she said.

The last officially-sanctioned deer hunt in Halton took place in 1967, and Miss Mulholland believes there are more deer in the area now than ever before. The ministry will issue 935 special licences to hunters - three-quarters of them Halton residents - permitting them to shoot one deer each using shotguns, but only after obtaining the permission of property owners on whose land they wish to hunt.

Pre-natal classes offered locally

The Childbirth Education Association of Toronto is now providing pre-natal classes in the Peel-Halton area.

The Association, active in the Toronto area for the past 20 years, is a non-profit, charitable organization, supported by interested people who believe that careful and comprehensive preparation for childbirth is of benefit for both parents and child. Its primary aim is to help provide a positive beginning to a new family life through education and support around the experience of childbirth and early parenting.

The CEA is affiliated with the International Childbirth Education Association, and supports its motto, "Freedom of Choice Through Knowledge of Alternatives". All twenty-five CEA teachers are certified by the international organization, and have undergone an intensive training programme.

Basic pre-natal and review classes are currently offered in Brampton by local teachers. Private classes are also available.

The basic pre-natal series consists of 10 classes, including an introductory class and post partum get together. Class content includes knowledge of the childbirth experience, maternal and infant nutrition, physical preparation for labour and delivery and emotional preparation for childbirth and the post partum period. Couple participation is strongly encouraged, although individual mothers are most welcome.

The review classes cover the basic preparation for labour and delivery, as well as emphasizing the new family relationships.

As more teachers from the Brampton area become involved, we hope to expand our services to include Caesarean preparation, and early parenting classes.

The course is currently offered through the Brampton "Y", McMurchy St. For information and enrolment, contact our office, 924-1628.
