Stewarttown hall costs $1,000 too high

Town council will pay an additional $1,000 to cover an estimate error made by the company repairing the Stewarttown community centre, although it could legally refuse the request.

Awarded the contract for improving both the Hornby and Stewarttown centres last July, Tower Restoration of Toronto turned in a low bid of $13,674 for both jobs of which $9,999 was the estimated cost to repair the Stewarttown building.

But the company underestimated the cost of installing additional beams in the building and asked the town's recreation and parks department to consider adding an extra $1,000 to the Stewarttown bill.

Although Coun. Harry Levy pointed out that the town was not legally obliged to pay the extra amount, recreation director Tom Shepard said that the company's figure for the Stewarttown work was $8,000 lower than the other tenders submitted and that the repairs were exceptionally well done.

project, they knew the price was wrong," Mr. Shepard told the committee. "But we decided to see if they did the work and did it satisfactorily. They actually put in a better floor than we had asked for."

Repairs to the Stewarttown centre have been completed.

Laurier grads

Several Halton Hills students were among 350 graduates receiving degrees at Wilfrid Laurier University's fall convocation, a recent event highlighted by the awarding of an honorary doctor of letters to Ross Munro, two-time president of the Canadian Press. Among local students honored were Jan Wegman and Jack Gudgeon of Acton and Margaret Arcuri and Angela Bourque of Georgetown, all of whom received general bachelor of arts degrees.

OLDER & BETTER

Fieldstone charmer built on a large lot (87' x 198'), containing 12 varieties of trees. This home was built by an owner-builder who paid attention to quality and tradition and is now offered for sale only the third time in its existence. Recent insulation, interior decorated & furnace replaced. Now offered for sale at $78,000.
