

Site 'F' woes prompt search

While one landfill site proposal remains bogged down before the courts, Halton region's solid waste management committee is seriously considering another location in Burlington as a possible solution to the region's garbage problem.

Known as Site "A", a 200-acre parcel of land located next to the existing regional dump on Burlington's King Road recently passed a hydrogeological study conducted to ensure that groundwater supplies will not be adversely affected if the property is ever used as a dumpsite.

The property, owned by National Sewer Pipe Ltd. of Canada is a definite contender to succeed the existing landfill site by 1983 if the 246-acre Site "F" proposal is finally rejected by the province.

Located on what is considered to be prime agricultural land on the northwest corner of the Tremaine-Britannia Roads intersection in Milton, Site F has met strong opposition from a local citizens lobby and from the town of Milton itself despite the fact that regional staff favor its central location for Halton's new dumpsite.

The region has conducted $500,000 worth of engineering studies at the site and argues that, if forced to look seriously at other locations, another $175,000 in addition studies would have to be spent.

Progress on Site "F" has been stalled while the region and the town of Milton await a provincial cabinet decision on whether or not public hearings on the proposal should be held under the Environmental Assessment Act, which would force the region to consider alternative sites, or under the Environmental Protection Act in which evidence brought to the hearing deals strictly with the Tremaine-Britannia location.

Meanwhile, Site "A", a shale quarry, continues to look more promising as an alternative to the battle-scarred Site "F" proposal.

The water study paid for by National Sewer Pipe indicates that the site will be suitable for a landfilling operation, but study consultants John Cherry and Don Lush warned that a second landfill site would be unheard of unless the region checks the "leachate" flow from the present dump.

Produced by water seeping through dumpsite trash, leachate contains numerous toxic chemicals, and unless corrected the consultants warned, the problem at the region's only landfill site could last for hundreds of years.

Regional solicitor Dennis Perlin warned council two months ago that costs associated with studying alternative sites could endanger the funds available for implementing an effective re-useable trash separation program in Halton.

UNICEF can help

The water used by 90 per cent of the population of the developing world is either unsafe, inadequate or both. UNICEF cards and calendars help the United Nations Children's Fund support projects to bring clean water supplies directly to communities where unsafe water is a major contributing cause of children's illness and death.
