

Maple Lodge workers reject agreement

Norval's Maple Lodge Farms and the union representing over 200 of its employees will return to the Ontario Labor Relations Board tomorrow (Thursday) after the employees voted down an agreement designed to resolve the differences.

Don Dayman, union negotiator for United Foods and Commercial Workers, said about 60 of the more than 200 eligible to vote turned out for the meeting Thursday. Only four voted to accept the pact.

Asked about the proportionally low turnout of employees, Mr. Dayman suggested those who chose not to vote probably knew those present would reject the agreement.

The deal would have put an end to the dispute involving almost 400 grievances which are now being heard by the Ontario Labor Relations Board. The union signed its first contract with Maple Lodge after a bitter three-week strike in October.

Union negotiators had recommended acceptance of the offer, which included an agreement to recall to work the strikers who had not been to work since the strike ended.

The agreement called for the union and the company to jointly apply to the ministry of labor for a grievance officer. Any grievances not resolved with the assistance of the grievance officer would go to arbitration.

The agreement also called for the company to return employees to the jobs they held before the strike. No time limit was set on this action, and union members apparently felt it was another empty promise, Mr. Dayman said.

The company has promised more than once to make changes in the plant but these changes have failed to materialize, and the union members are becoming disillusioned, Mr. Dayman said.

It would be fruitless for the two sides to work out another agreement to take to the union until the company makes some changes in the plant to show they are acting in good faith, he said.

Hiring process begins

The Halton board of education has approved a selection process for the hiring of a new education director.

Director Em Lavender recently submitted his resignation, effective at the end of this school year.

The board will appoint an internal selection committee, composed of the chairman, vice-chairman and three other trustees, which will select an External Consultative Recruitment Committee.

The board hopes to have a candidate selected by late June, to begin carrying out official duties by Jan. 1, 1982.
