TEAMWORK AT FIRST BASE

The Georgetown Slings work as a team and that means covering up well at first base as this Hornby girl strides down the baseline. In game action at the Glen diamond last Friday night the Slings defeated Hornby 21-2. (Herald photo)

Cornwell races at Welland County

Two Georgetown short trackers, Jon Cornwell and first year expert Steve Duff cleaned up in the lightweight class at Welland tonight running one-two throughout the final.

stick so close to the Inglis Cycle Centre Yamaha figured that with a bit more experience he'll be able to make Cornwell really fight for a win.

OPEN CLASS
 In the open class event, both riders qualified for the final - Duff riding Cornwell's usual mount the Bel-Tay-Champion-Microlon sponsored 500 Yamaha and Cornwell, trying out the experimental Powerhouse Honda 450 two-stroke, being developed by Jim Sehl.

After a slight hang up on the starting line of the open final it was discovered that the Honda's clutch release bushing had welded to the shaft so Cornwell rode the bike in circles well behind the line until all was ready and then charged through the line-up as the flag dropped, to leap into an early lead through the first corner.

A crash in the first lap caused a restart and Cornwell's timing on the restart was faulty enough to send him through the first corner dead last. Undismayed he started slicing through the opposition on the nimble and powerful two-stroke and by the mid-point of the race he had only the first two riders to pass when the chain came off.

through the pack found his path blocked and finished fifth.

After the race a philosophical Cornwell, admitting his frustration at being robbed of a "sure win," felt the Honda was powerful enough to be a threat on any short-tack or half mile and warned the sponsors not to put the machine in the hands of a junior - "it's dangerous - you could wheelie over backwards in top gear down the back straight."
