

MORE SUMMERFEST, PIONEER DAYS FUN

Back in the days of the wild Yukon gold rush, theatre was as soapy and corny as many of today's afternoon television programming. Upholding the tradition, organizers of Saturday's "Old Time Music Hall" - a riotous Summerfest finale this year in Georgetown - staged "Mary, The Magnate's Daughter". This snippet of melodrama was appropriately received by the sold-out audience of about 210 who hissed, boomed and finally cheered as evil was eventually overcome by the terrible jokes of the forces of good.

Seven-year old David Young is learning to become quite a ship-builder. David, as well as dozens of other youngsters, took advantage of the "Childsart" program during Georgetown's Summerfest Saturday. Organized by a group of about 20 parents, "Childsart" is gaining momentum as a children's diversion during local fairs and outdoor events.

"Not enough people dress up in pioneer costumes," a colorfully-attired Doug Norton (left) commented following Saturday's Pioneer Fashion Show, which was judged by Norman Elson (centre) and Martha Lewis and organized by Betty Monchamp (right) of the Lingerie Boutique. About a dozen models showed off some period outfits recalling days of yore, but as well-received as the show was, those involved expressed hope that more citizens will get involved next year.

The Country Cheese Shoppe on Georgetown's Mill Street set up a barbecue for Pioneer Days. Owner Erin Waltes turned farmers' sausages, which eventually found their way between kaisers, creating a taste treat which celebrants found hard to resist during festivities Saturday.

For one night only, they called her "Second-hand Rose". One of the stars of the Old Time Music Hall was Sandra Greig, cranking out some genuine "old time" favorites with true dancehall girl flare. Other songstresses at the event, which wrapped up Summerfest Saturday night, were Brenda Archer, Pat Friend, Doreen Boss and Ruth Shembri. In true music hall fashion, there was plenty of comedy "corn" and lots of participation from the capacity crowd gathered at the Sacre Coeur Hall.

Award
for fire-

Acton resident Reg Landriault recently received an Ontario Medal for Firefighters' Bravery for his part in work done by the Mississauga Fire Department the night of a train derailment and evacuation in November, 1979. The province gave a medal to the department last fall which is kept in the Malton Station where Mr. Landriault works but the individual medals were only handed out last week. Mr. Landriault is the only Mississauga fireman living in Acton. He has been on the force for 10 years and became a captain last June.

"Let me off at Broadway," the burdensome lady instructed the bus driver. "Certainly," he replied patiently. Every block or two thereafter, the woman loudly reminded the driver not to forget to let her off at Broadway. She finally demanded, "How will I know when we get to Broadway?" "By the smile on my face, lady," sighed the driver.
