CONSUMER BEAT

Ready or not, it's back to school time

Labour Day traditionally signals the end of summer and the reluctant return of kids to the three Rs: reading, riting and 'rithmetic. If you're parents of back-to-schoolers, you may face the three Rs too: refunds and exchanges, rip-offs and realities.

The three Rs of shopping for back-to-school needs are really no different from being a wise consumer all year round. Shop around, compare prices, read the fine print, make a shopping list and stick to it. It's your money. Get full value for it.

Refunds and exchanges "I want my money back!" This familiar cry is often followed by hassle and frustration for the consumer and the merchant. This may come as a shock to you, but merchants are under no legal obligation to give a refund or an exchange unless the goods are defective or clearly do not live up to sales claims. However, most responsible merchants realize that a fair refund and exchange policy is good public relations; it helps them get, and keep, their customers.

clothing and shoes fit properly. Look closely at both shoes or gloves; defective merchandise should be caught at the point of sale. If you're buying a typewriter, or some other mechanical item, have it demonstrated or make sure there is an unconditional refund or exchange policy in force.

Above all, be sceptical of extravagant sales claims. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

Sometimes you will be offered coupons worth a discount if you buy before a certain date, or you might be able to buy two of something with the second item at a lower price. (Buy one and get a second for 1c.) The manufacturer or merchant naturally builds in his profit margin and hopes the increased volume will result in greater sales.

These and other genuine marketing "tricks of the trade" help keep prices down through honest competition between merchants. They help you make your consumer dollar go further. Where you should be on guard is in the area of tricks of the marketplace that are dishonest, illegal or in that grey area of trickery that requires consumer self-reliance and a knowledge of how the marketplace works.

business which plays dirty or breaks the rules.

The consumer game you're involved in is much more complex than a hockey game, but the players compete just as vigorously. The idea is to win. The Ontario Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations is the referee. If you think one of the players has broken the rules, give us a call — we may be able to help.

For further information on consumer rights and responsibilities, write to the Ontario Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations, 555 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 2H6, or telephone (416) 963-1111. Collect calls welcome.

Your obligation is to make sure you understand the refund and exchange policy in effect where you buy. Consumer self-reliance is always cheaper than legal hassles after some unhappy shopping experience.

When shopping for back-to-school clothes and equipment, remember these handy tips:

- Comparison shop. Read the advertisements, compare prices, guarantees and service agreements.
- Avoid impulse buying or faddy trends. Unless you have unlimited funds you should ask yourself: Do I really need this item? Can I afford it? Is this the best price?
- Shop at reputable stores. Watch out for the razzle-dazzle cut-rate outlet that opened last week. In exchange for low prices you may not be allowed to return anything. Ask your friends where they buy specific items. Check the store's reputation through your local Better Business Bureau or Chamber of Commerce.
- Examine the merchandise carefully. Make sure that

Rip-offs

How much should that pair of runners cost? What is a fair price for a child's sweater? How will you know whether one brand of children's socks will last longer than another? If you're unhappy with an item because it didn't live up to your expectations, or you bought something and then realized you paid too much for it, you may be inclined to shout "rip-off!"

There is no "rip-off" legislation in Ontario although the Consumer Protection Act and the Business Practices Act provide ample opportunity for you to seek legal help in obvious cases of fraud or misrepresentation in the marketplace.

These consumer protection laws can be compared to the referee in a hockey game. He may blow the whistle on a business and penalize any
