

LOTS TO CHOOSE FROM

Sacre Coeur Church in Georgetown just about burst last weekend with people crowding in to have a gander at its elaborate two-day bazaar. There were the usual bazaar items—bake sales, a rummage table and raffles—but there was also plenty to do, like bingo or figuring out how many dollar bills were stuck to Roseanna Chaisson's hat. Denise Gravelle (left) and Solange Houle handled the bake table for the church. Meanwhile, a cake baked by Father Serge Vinet was raffled off, earning the church more than $300.

Acid rain: MP says report due

By JOHN McDERMID, M.P.
Drampton-Georgetown

Acid rain has become a major concern to many Canadians but just what is it? In brief, it is rainwater which has been contaminated with trace amounts of sulphuric acid and/or nitric acid. The acids are derived from emissions of sulphur and nitrogen oxides which are released to the environment during the combustion of fossil fuels and the smelting of sulphide ores. As they are transported through the atmosphere, the oxides react with oxygen and moisture to form the acids.

JOHN McDERMID

When the problem was first described in the 1950s, it was considered a local problem resulting from Ontario lakes' proximity to nickel smelting operations. Since then, however, it has become wider in scope.

Acid rain is not a new phenomenon. The adverse effects of "corrosive rain" have been recorded as early as 1852 in Wales. Scandinavian countries have also been severely polluted by acid rain.

People often wonder why, if the problem is not a new one, they have not heard much about it until recently. The fact is that until recently, most environmental problems have been generally ignored until they reach crisis proportions.

The ecological consequences of acid rain become apparent only after enough acid has accumulated to bring about an observable effect. In Ontario, the decline of various species of fish is well documented and the hardest hit are lake trout, brook trout and walleye. But not only our lakes are in jeopardy; it is well known that acid rain affects the germination of seeds and growth of seedlings and damages foliage, thereby affecting our forests.

Effects on human health are still very ambiguous. Acid rain passing through plumbing may increase copper and lead concentrations and some natural spring waters already show elevated levels of lead, copper, aluminum, mercury and cadmium. All these metals can affect human health but to what extent has not been conclusively determined.

Large areas of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, almost all of Newfoundland, most of Quebec and large areas of Ontario are susceptible to the effects of acid rain.

The Parliamentary sub-committee on acid rain released its report this month.

The committee, made up of nine members of Parliament representing all three federal parties, concluded that acid rain is a devastating environmental threat and its sources must be controlled effectively and immediately. The committee has made 38 recommendations aimed at controlling this problem. It is up to both levels of government and industry to ensure the recommendations' implementation.

If you would like a copy of the report, please contact my office.
