Youngsters witness Sarah's baptism rites

By WINIFRED SMITH

Another beautiful Sunday morning brought many out to the Worship Service at the Church Sunday.

The Junior Choir sang beautifully and another added pleasure for the congregation was to witness the baptismal service.

As several thank-you cards. A programme committee for the season was chosen, namely Peggy Early, Jean Brander, Ruth Thompson, and Irene Hunter.

Committee for euchre which started Monday at the school are Mr. and Mrs. Keith Webb and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Jamieson spent Sunday at Kincardine where they visited sons Alan and Murray with their wives and families.

The remainder of the evening was spent playing cards with Gertrude McGee and Mac Alexander high talls, and Vera Thatcher and Gord Early consolation.

The family of Arthur and Eva Burton of RR2 Norval gave a surprise party for their parents' 40th wedding anniversary Saturday evening. St. Alban's Church Hall in Glen Williams was the setting of a lovely buffet, when 40 friends and neighbors gathered to wish the happy couple many more anniversaries.

Anne Wilson and Nellie Shea motored to Montreal on the weekend and visited with the Glen Elliott family. The Elliotts were former Norval residents.

'The Hollow Crown'

Continued from A7 well. With the simple addition of a flower to her flaming red hair, she became a young Jane Austen, reciting her own private history of the kings and queens written when she was 15. Shortly afterward, she became Queen Victoria, fondly recalling the whirlwind of emotions both she and her subjects felt on the day of her coronation. Other memorable performances included Glen Tarlin's Henry VII musing over the appearance of the Queen of Naples, whom he was to marry. There were plenty of laughs as he queried his fidgety ambassadors, John Day and Bev Nicholas, about her, right down to the minutest detail concerning the shape of her nose. It was the material in the "Hollow Crown" and the way it was interpreted which made it such a success during its three-day run at Emmanuel Church. It also was another example of the outstanding performing arts talent in the north Halton-Brampton area.

Baby Sarah (so far have not been able to get more details) was christened, Rev. Bandy officiating. It was unique as the minister had the little ones gather around to hear the story and see what went on. It surely would leave an impression on the young minds. Penny Shortill is taking a
