Considered The Herald's Best Photo of the Year by staff members, this shot of Wrigglesworth Public School students celebrating Education Week last May was taken by reporter Chris Auguard. Charlene and Bobby Christle, Teresa Pearce, Bobbi Hyde, Wayne Campbell and John Hilller were among the students putting on a creative show for visitors to their school's fun fair.

For the second year. The Herald participated in downtown Georgetown's June Pioneer Pays by choosing, with some advice from local historian John McDonald, a "Pioneer Citizen of the Year" who best represents, in the modern context, some facet of Georgetown heritage. In 1981 that person was Barbara Elizabeth Tost, 97, great-granddaughter of the community's founder, George Kennedy, Making it official during the Ploneer Days fun downtown were Herald editor Paul Dorsey (left) and Mrs. Tost's representatives, son Albert and daughter Nan Wheeler.

Lovely folk and country rock singer Sylvia Tyson brought her band, the Great Speckled Bird, to the John Elliott Theatre Nov. I for a special performance during opening week for the Library-Cultural Centre. Following hot on the heels of another well-known Canadian music star, Ronnie Hawkins, Miss Tyson delighted her local audience with her charm and professional-

That's Life

When you're looking for ways to protect your family, think of permanent life insurance. It's one of the most unselfish things you'll ever buy. You don't buy it just for yourself. You buy it because there are others who need you as much as you need them. That's life.

So when you're looking for life insurance . . think of me.

Candidates for Halton-Burlington in the March 11 provincial election enjoyed a chuckle following a candidate's meeting. As a moderator (second from right) leads them from the stage, (left to right) New Democrat Chris Cutier, Liberal Julian Rood (subsequently re-elected to a third term to become The Herald's Politician of the Year) and Progressive Conservative Fran Baines shook off the campaign tensions with a shared joke.

Acton man makes appeal for disabled car drivers

Asked what she thought was accomplished in the Year of the Disabled, Anne Dodds, an Acton resident with rheumatoid arthritis who was active on the ActiVan committee.

ONROAD

was a "colossal" achievement

she said, but she noted that there are still no special parking spots for the disabled in Acton and no ramps allowing them access into municipal things that don't get looked at, like the stairs at the arena," Mrs. Dodds complained. "Ifeel a lot of lip service was passed around. This is the Year of the Disabled — big deal.

"I would like people to be aware that when a handicapped person walks anywhere, it's harder for them than for a normal person. If you're in a wheelchair and have to shop, you can't reach down into a freezer or high up on a shelf,

And in most stores you can't fit in between the shelves." Mrs.

spaces for the disabled. Mr. Doberthien learned there are 900 municipalities in Ontario. It would be confusing if each of them set up their own system to deal with the handicapped in their community, so the province is working on setting up a uniform system scross Ontario, he was told by Mr. Snow.

"Although I don't think of myself as disabled, there are times that I do need some help," said Mr.Doberthien,

"The U.S. is way ahead of us in this. They have $200 fines for people who park in spots designated for the handicapped and special licences for cars driven by the handicapped, identifying them as such." Mr. Doberthien said Nova Scotia has a similar system with the licence plates. However, he doesn't see it as necessarily a good idea. The handlcapped don't like to be singled out in a way that leaves them open to harrassment from people who see them as an easy mark, Mr. Doberthien DON'T DRIVE 'Nine out of ten disabled don't drive - their friends drive," he said. "Having a plate that can be put in the window of a car that has a handicapped person as passenger is a better idea." That way the plate can be carried in a purse and used with different drivers.

Although Mr. Snow told Mr. Dobethien that there would be no changes before the Christmas recess of the provincial legislature, he promised there would be a spring package of amendments to improve the parking situation. "When I was in his office, I said to myself 'Either it's going to start or stop here in Jim Snow's office'," Mr. Doberthien said. "I've done as much as I could to make the news media and the politicians aware of the problems."

Pleased with the results his nvolvement appears to be bringing about, Mr. Doberthien expects some positive action within a year.
