

the HERALD Entertainment GLT's biggest box office booster

A mixed audience of young and old took a trip through "Wonderland" at the John Elliott Theatre Saturday night as the Elizabeth Paterson Dance Company of Oakville, with the Oakville School of Dance, performed "Alice in Wonderland". The show, which featured all of the old favorites like the Mad Hatter, White Rabbit, Tweedledee and Tweedledum and, of course, Alice, was sponsored locally by the Halton Hills School of Dance.

As fantasy literature goes, Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland" is probably the most puzzling and carefully studied story of its genre, although it's been a children's favorite for 120 years.

Its complexity, however, didn't scare Elizabeth Paterson. Her ballet version of "Alice", with music by Anthony Royce, delighted a packed house full of Halton Hills youngsters and parents Saturday night at the John Elliott Theatre.

The hour-long production was sponsored by the Halton Hills School of Dance and performed by the Elizabeth Paterson Dance Company with young members of the Oakville School of Dance. Performances like this leave little doubt why Canada is currently producing some of the world's top ballet dancers.

A familiar face? You bet. Many readers will recognize Greta Le-Nicholas as the Georgetown Little Theatre box office lady. Greta has looked after the box office for several years — an onerous task, and one which became monumental last fall when GLT staged their first production in the new John Elliott Theatre.

For the first time, the little theatre was able to offer comfortable, reserved seats which, although preferable from an audience point of view, entailed much more work for the box office. Undaunted, Greta sailed into the job and with a minimum of setbacks managed to keep most people happy with their choice of seats. Any problems which occurred during the run of the first play have now been dealt with, and it should be smooth sailing from now on.

Looking after the box office has not been Greta's only contribution to GLT. Formerly a member of the Simcoe Little Theatre, she joined the Georgetown group 13 years ago and has helped backstage with props, wardrobe, front of house, and every June convenes the annual dinner for members and subscribers.

Not only a backstage worker, Greta has appeared on stage in "A Letter From The General" and "The Miracle Worker". Her first husband, Bob Lee, will be remembered for his dedicated work with the little theatre, serving as both treasurer and president. Greta's son, Ian, has appeared in GLT plays, and true to the GLT tradition of involving everyone in the family her
