Heritage worth remembering:

A brief history of the past award winners

JACK HARRISON

The beginnings of the Georgetown Hockey Heritage award originated four years ago when a Yugoslavian hockey team came to play the Intermediate A Raiders.

In making the announcement of the award, Harrison, the club's trainer, spent the last half century or so devoting part of his life to hockey.

Telegrams were received from Harold Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens and Lefty Reid, curator of the Hockey Hall of Fame. Ballard also sent along a hockey stick autographed by all the members of the Maple Leaf team.

Bill Evdokimoff, publisher of the Halton Hills Herald, presented Harrison with a 16 inch by 24 inch color portrait of the trainer in full Raider garb.

Four hundred people gathered for the Georgetown Raiders Hockey Heritage dinner at Holy Cross Auditorium Feb. 14 to among other things pay homage to Jack Harrison.

1979 Dinner
Roy Norton Sr. was chosen as the 1979 winner of the Hockey Heritage award. It was the first year the Hockey Heritage council used public nominations for the award.

In his years with hockey, Norton was president and treasurer of the Support Group, treasurer of the International Bantam tournament and he served in various capacities in the house leagues. He was never a coach or manager of a team.

"The one thing about being involved with kids' hockey is that the boys kept me feeling young," Norton said.

For their many years of devoted service and involvement in minor hockey in Georgetown, the local Branch 120 of the Royal Canadian Legion was chosen 1980 winners of the Hockey Heritage award.

Their association with minor hockey dates back to 1936 and the Little NHL.

1981 Dinner
Mr. L.G. Bud James was last year's recipient of the Hockey Heritage award.

The involvement of James in Georgetown hockey dates to 1945 in the days of Legion hockey. He assisted Reverend Len Self during those early morning Saturday games and was active in Saturday hockey for 17 years.

The diversity of his interest and participation in all levels of hockey in the community are particularly impressive. James was on the executive of Support Group hockey for two years.

During the early sixties he was manager of the Georgetown Midgets who won three consecutive OMHA championships.

1982 Dinner
The 1982 winner of the Heritage Award is Gerry Inglis, present coach of the Georgetown Chrysler Raiders Intermediate A hockey club.

Both as a player and coach, Gerry has displayed a tremendous amount of dedication, leadership and talent to Georgetown hockey.

Although they are not actively involved in hockey this year, the Legion has over the years been instrumental in the involvement of young hockey players in the community.

Fire Safety can 'play with the best'

By L. THIBAUT
Herald Special

The United Fire Safety Minor Pee Wees continued to show they can play with the best double "A" teams around Toronto last week as they tied two games and lost a third by a whisker in exhibition play.

Coaches Richard Lorito and Paul Morrow said they have been pleased in recent games with the strong desire and improved passing demonstrated by the squad.

In the first game, against Thornhill (Thursday) the teams traded goals in the first period as Trevor Harley scored.

Alain Thibault put us ahead in the second with Jeff Brady assisting on both goals.

But Thornhill came back with two more goals in the second frame to go ahead 3-2.

The squads battled throughout the third period until David Harris tied the game with less than a minute to go with the help of Trent Burton and Jason Arnold.

On Saturday, the boys played Richmond Hill to a 2-2 tie on the strength of goals by Mark Shepherd with the help of Donnie Cruise and Alain Thibault and by David Harris assisted by John Lorito and Donnie Cruise.

Sunday saw some fast-paced exciting hockey as the squad hosted the Mississauga Jets who rank third in their league.

It was one of those frustrating games where we outplayed the opposition and outshot them by a margin of at least 2 to 1 but the puck wouldn't go in.

The score was 3-2 with a minute left in the game on goals by Jeff Brady and Mark Shepherd...Ken Langdon assisted on both goals, and Alain Thibault and Peter Atherley also earned an assist.

Goalie Paul Howlett who had made several key saves early in the game was pulled for a sixth attacker, but intensive pressure on the Jets couldn't produce the equalizer.

They finally slipped the last goal in our open net with ten seconds left to win 4-2.

West Insurance DRG Juveniles attain 5-1 victory over Stratford

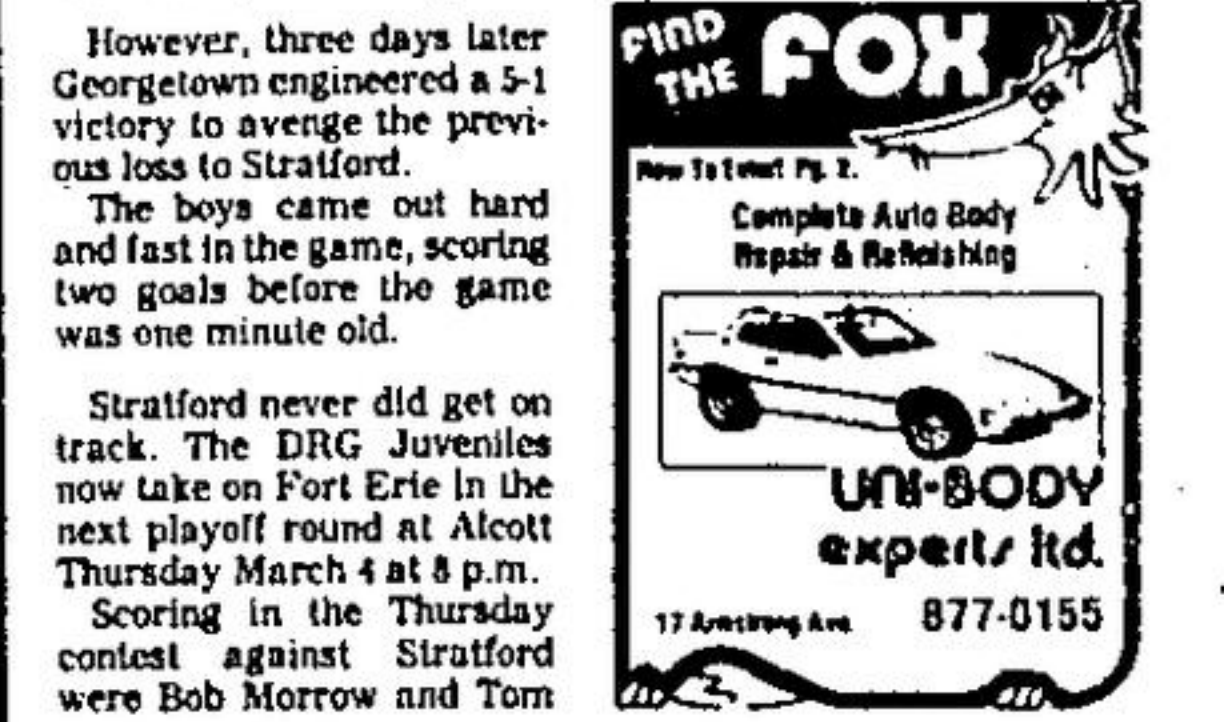

The DRG West Insurance Juvenile rep hockey team from Georgetown just weren't "up" for their Monday (Feb 22) game against Stratford as they lost 7-1. Only Kelvin Hackett scored, assisted by Bob Davey.

However, three days later Georgetown engineered a 5-1 victory to avenge the previous loss to Stratford.

The boys came out hard and fast in the game, scoring two goals before the game was one minute old.

Stratford never did get on track. The DRG Juveniles now take on Fort Erie in the next playoff round at Alcott Thursday March 4 at 8 p.m.

Scoring in the Thursday contest against Stratford were Bob Morrow and Tom Cull with two goals while Brad Nicolucci had a single. Assists were earned by Tom Cull (2), Bob Morrow, Brad Nicolucci, Shane Lefebvre, Ken Ward and Bob Davey.
