LEGISLATURE
RECONVENES

The Throne Speech, opening the Second Session of the Thirty-Second Parliament, focused on the depressed state of the economy. A considerable length, blame was laid at the feet of the federal government.

Ottawa was, at the same time, urged to co-operate in upgrading rail services, improving drydock facilities on the Great Lakes, developing an Ontario Hydro fusion program and establishing an autotechnical centre.

The federal government was also asked to restrict car imports and oblige foreign manufacturers to increase to 85 per cent the Canadian content of cars manufactured here.

A number of vague promises were made, including jobs to be created for construction workers, out-of-school youth and foresters in northern Ontario.

Proposed social reforms included improved equal pay legislation for women, support for day care and mandatory automobile restraint for children under five years old, or weighing less than 50 pounds.

Since no dollar values were attached to any of the Throne Speech proposals, we shall have to wait until the budget comes down next month to assess the value of the promises made.

Apparently the Premier and his colleagues continue to place their faith in the Board of Industrial Leadership and Development (BILD) Program and the upturn in economic conditions in North America predicted for later this year.

The province is at present supplementing Unemployment Insurance payments to provide employment for forestry workers. It seems the Treasurer is to negotiate further with Ottawa for the use of UIC funds to "provide employment in other areas of worthwhile endeavors" and the intention is to do the same for workers in the mining industry as has been done for forestry workers.

Did you realize?

DID YOU REALIZE Red Cross teaches fitness for senior citizens? It's part of their services for seniors program, which also can include Meals on Wheels, Friendly Visiting, Telephone Assurance programs and many other ways to ease the loneliness of the aged.

DID YOU REALIZE that the Red Cross Blood Donor Recruitment service needs two kinds of volunteers. Some volunteers give blood, some give time to help recruit and register at blood donor clinics. Each volunteer is valuable, because blood and time are two things which can't be manufactured.

That God can call its own.

Farmers have been promised an expansion of the Farm Adjustment Assistance Program, and there is to be more start-up capital assistance for young farmers.

Laid-off workers are promised additional protection under the Employment Standards Act. Severance pay is to be given priority over other claims upon a bankrupt company. Non-union employees are to be given their first protection against unjust dismissal.

There is to be assistance to Northern communities to establish facilities to provide extended-care services to the elderly. Special advanced training in cardiopulmonary resuscitation is promised for ambulance personnel, as well as homemaker programs to serve the elderly, frail and disabled.

Although given Third Reading last Dec. 7, the Human Rights Code will not be proclaimed until June, to coincide with the 20th anniversary of the original Ontario Code.

A general review of long-term options for improved commuter service is promised.

There is to be legislation to permit municipalities to conduct business in French as well as English and to allow wills and land registration documents to be in French.

Once the constitution is patriated, Ontario will opt into all the provisions of the new Canadian Charter of Rights.

OPPOSITION REACTION
Both Opposition Leaders accused the government of failing to grasp the seriousness of the economic recession.

Describing the Throne Speech as a major disappointment, Liberal Leader David Peterson said it was "a rehash of old programs and a restatement of universal principles... (with) absolutely no sense of urgency."

He had hoped the Speech would announce a major commitment to job training, particularly for "jobs of the future" and renewable energy. There was also "a glaring absence of interest rate relief for homeowners."

"If the Premier had been out of this building more in the last two or three months, he'd know the economic situation is far more serious..."

Peterson claimed there were a "whole host of meaningful responses" which Ontario could make, similar to those taken by other provinces.

"He has to find room to move. He'll argue all the time that he doesn't have room to move and then he finds money to buy an oil company or... a jet."
