HALTON 4-H VETERINARY SCIENCE CLUB

The second regular meeting of the Halton 4-H Veterinary Science Club was held at the Agricultural Office March 11.

Doug Miller discussed special projects which are to be a 14 by 16-inch model of any aspect of the club project. Only one project is required regardless of how many clubs each member is in.

We then viewed live cattle embryos and semen under a microscope and found them interesting.

Ken McNabb brought in a cow's reproductive system and Dr. Catlon went over the parts in detail. A hand-out dealing with calving procedures was discussed along with the "hows" and "whys" of artificial insemination. Dr. Catlon's artistic talents came out as he drew and discussed the internal organs of a cow and briefly discussed the four stomachs. The meeting was then adjourned.

A Rumenant is an animal that has four stomachs. Can you name the four stomachs? The 4-H members of the Halton 4-H Veterinary Science Club had to do just that March 15 at the Agricultural Office.

The stomachs are as follows: (1) Reticular, (2) Rumen, (3) Omasum, (4) Abomasum. The topic for the evening was on the digestive system. Dr. Catlon spent time telling us some unusual things about an animal's digestive system and as usual we were surprised at what we learned.

Dr. Catlon talked briefly about how important each stomach is to the cow, and that a calf's most important stomach is their Abomasum. We discussed what was the most common disease in the Reticular (hardware); Rumen (Bloat); Omasum (Impacted); and Abomasum (Twisted stomach).

The meeting was closed with a brief quiz about the reproductive system and the digestive system. Dr. Catlon reviewed the quiz with the group.
