

Eat your hearts out, Martin and Downs

Send in the clowns and the strong men and the jugglers and everyone else who helps make a circus a circus. At the Limehouse circus Friday, there were tall clowns and really short ones but they were all equally funny and provided a lively and entertaining way to end a long week of classes.

"Starring the Kindergarten Class", the program boldly announced, and star it did as it presented a circus, complete with lions and elephants, clowns and acrobats and, let's not forget, a real ringmaster. Youngsters, like the ones in the above photo waiting for their turn in the ring, provided some outstanding entertainment to parents and fellow classmates at Limehouse school Friday morning. Largely members of the school's kindergarten class, circus performers were assisted by older counterparts in Grade 6.

Lions were a key attraction at the Limehouse school circus which brought parents and students out in droves Friday morning. These lions were well trained and showed no fear as they teaped through the dreaded ring of "fire". Each act of the circus was sensationally introduced by ringmaster Christopher White.

No circus would be complete without a daring aerial act and there were a couple of real thrillers at the Limehouse school circus presented by the school's kindergarten class Friday morning. Parents were also invited to attend the performance.

CVCA gets $228,250 for erosion control

A provincial grant of $228,250 to the Credit Valley Conservation Authority will be used for implementation of the 1982 Credit River erosion control project.

In approving the grant, natural resources minister Alan Pope said the erosion protection works will be undertaken on eleven previously identified sites exhibiting high erosion hazards. The works will be located on the Credit River and its main tributaries.

The purpose of the project is to stabilize existing eroding banks by various types of bank stabilization, channel protection and revegetation works. Works of a preventative nature, to curtail further erosion, as well as site inspections and erosion monitoring will also be undertaken.

Total cost of the project is $415,000.
