

Functional sculptures part of new five-artist show at Forge

The Forge Studio Gallery in Terra Cotta offers new works by five artists June 20 to July 18.

Joan Wagner has produced a series of pieces decorated with colored slips and glazes for this show. She expresses humor, life and energy in her functional ware. Joan is currently studying at the Banff Centre School of Fine Arts. They have been very generous in providing assistance for her in this show.

Urve Aedna will be showing a group of expressive, gestural oils and watercolors.

Stephen Levitt a furniture maker and designer will show turned plates and bowls as well as sculptural works. His sculptures relate to the wood as an origin and investigate the crossover point when mass becomes form.

Jo Wallerson will feature a series of watercolors depicting the Caledon clay hills.

Agnes Olive's new experimental raku forms called "Adobe" relate to structures and ruins of primitive cultures.

Meet the artists June 20 from 12 to 5 p.m. Gallery hours are Wednesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays from noon to 5.

Celebrate Father's Day by taking him for a drive in the country and visit the Forge Studio Gallery.

BEST OF THE BANDS

Rising to accept the enthusiastic applause of 700 area music fans, the Central Band of the Canadian Armed Forces ended a five-day regional tour at the Acton community centre Saturday night. Conductor Derek Stannard summoned the 60 band members to their feet several times during the concert, presented by area Masonic lodges. The largest of Canada's nine military bands had a hefty repertoire as well, surprising delighted audience members with such diverse and distinctly non-military selections as Bach's classics and Broadway's best toe-tappers. All proceeds go to hearing research. Warrant officer Donald Laver (left) joined Actonlan Jack Carpenter and Ontario Lieutenant-Governor John Aldr in addressing the audience. (Herald photos by Harald Bransch)

HALTON HILLS ARTS COUNCIL

Summerfest is coming. What's a Summerfest? You might ask that if you have been unlucky enough to miss it in the past.

Summerfest is a festival of the arts sponsored by the Arts Council in conjunction with the downtown Georgetown Pioneer Days celebrations. Pioneer Days is a three-day presentation June 17, 18 and 19. Summerfest joins the fun June 19 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

You will have no trouble locating Summerfest. Church Street between Main and Market will be closed to vehicular traffic, and there it will be.

The arts and crafts show and sale will be enlivened by demonstrations giving you the chance to see the processes involved in producing the finished work of art. There will be activities for the children as well as a display of "Childsart". The library will be having a used book sale and the cultural centre will be offering guided tours. Folk singing and other musical entertainment will enliven the scene.

Meanwhile back on Main Street South and Mill Street, Pioneer Days celebrations will be continuing with free pony rides, antique cars and steam engines, the Lion's pancake breakfast, fashion shows and games, parades and square dancing and much more.

Put the two together and Summerfest and Pioneer Days offers enough to keep you busy all day.

As the sun sets in the west and evening shadows fall, you may wish there was some place you could go for an excellent meal and some great entertainment to finish off your enjoyable day at
