Facing the 'bomb' issue

Herald Special The subject of disarmament is on everyone's minds, not only the citizens of most countries but also many of their heads of . state.

The United Nations has organized a special session in New York to discuss disarmament. With wars raging in many parts of the world and with the growing threat of nuclear conflict, all minds are turned towards working for peace.

In 1914 when the First World War broke out in Europe, many people were also talking about peace. One such group founded an organization called AFS, and began to work on a volunteer basis in Europe as an ambulance corps. Those first ambulance. drivers and first-aid medics have been replaced by over 100,000 volunteers who now organize

Although the goal of promoting world peace remains the same, AFS now helps people to discover a small part of the world by living a full year abroad. The most effective way to promote peace is to build bridges between countries, cultures and people. AFS organizes one year homestays for over 5,000 students a year. The students while living in another country study in a local high school and complete their final year. You can be part of this international body of volunteers by hosting a student from another country for one year. This small act from which you will gain so much, will go a long way to building a world free of war and violent conflict. If you are interested, call collect to AFS in Montreal at 514-527-8888.
