

Alregis Acres equestrian event draws 140 entrants

Grooming, showmanship count

By HARALD BRANSCH
Herald Special

Over 140 entrants gathered Sunday and Monday for the annual Alregis Acres pony and horse shows.

The show, which features the UCO Classic and its $250 prize money, ran four divisions Sunday, most involving younger competitors, and the final four Monday with more advanced riders.

The show is an all-comers event and is considered a schooling show with a Canadian Equestrian Federation permit, but is not recognized by the CEF as a competition.

Organizers Al and Cheryl Spence were pleased with the outcome of the show, especially with the turnout Monday despite the rain.

Results are as follows:

Pony Hunter Under

It was all in the family for the Amos girls of RR3 Georgetown Sunday and Monday as they participated in the Alregis Acres Pony and Horse Show north of Georgetown. While sisters Allison and Michelle were giving it their best shots in their own age categories, Katie Amos rode Irish Coffee to the overall Novice division championship. There were dozens of local competitors involved in the annual show, which featured the UCO $250 Classic won by Allen Erlick riding Coal Town.

Come, survive with us

The Halton Hills Recreation Department is offering a new program this summer.

Survival Camp is an experience no child will forget. Children ages 10 to 12 years old are welcome to join leaders Kim Newcombe, Anne Ramsay, Kristi Champ and Heather Gage (supervisor) at Rockwood Conservation Area. Aug. 16, 17 and 18 are the dates to keep open for this fantastic time.

The children will experience camping skills such as pitching and striking a tent as well as a lean too, firebuilding, camp cooking, plant and tree identification, nature hiking, care of equipment and camp safety. Included in this great time is swimming canoeing and campfire programs.

The cost of this fun-packed learning experience is only $40 per child. See you there!

For more information about this program, call 877-5185 ext. 63.

MYSTERY BUG

It's red and blue and green and yellow and it sure looks funny. One of The Herald's carriers stopped by last week to show off an unusual caterpillar his mom, Mary Scida, has found on an apple tree at their Moore Park Crescent home. "She was watering the tree and found it on a leaf", David Scida (centre), 10, said. His sister Janet, 8, and friend Derek Pollitt, 10, said they weren't scared of the bug, though they had never seen one like it before. The caterpillar has neat rows of protruding colored antennae along its back and sides. The three youngsters are going to watch its transformation into a butterfly.
