

Jaycettes welcome you

Club unlocks secret of self-motivation

Herald Special
The New Year is a season to reflect on our opportunities and those less fortunate than ourselves, those without the necessities which Canadians take for granted.

Project Concern is a worldwide organization working to give all children the right to life. Every cent contributed by the Georgetown Jaycettes goes directly into communities requesting assistance.

Service to humanity is the best work of life, but the main purpose of Jaycettes is to develop young women through projects within the community. The Jaycettes build leaders and self-confidence by creating community projects such as Buckle Up Baby, Polka Dot Door and participation at local events. Individual development courses such as effective speaking, chairmanship and executive training are offered with in the organization to promote self-awareness. The Georgetown Jaycettes invite women between the ages of 18 and 40 to get acquainted at a film night being presented Jan. 19 at Sheridan College in Brampton. Chairmanship will be explored with "The Secrets of Motivation", "Meetings, Bloody Meetings" and "The Engineering of an Agreement". Anyone can get more information about Jaycettes or the film night by calling Bev Daquano at 877-8756 (evenings).

Firm experiments

While the future of Abitibi-Price's Georgetown operation remains in doubt, the company is exploring new ways to keep the local plant in business.

Layoffs have continued at the plant, manager George Lockwood told The Herald Monday. He didn't rule out the possibility of more in the future as the firm struggles to remain viable in the paper-coating market. (Wallpaper is an example of Abitibi Georgetown's product line).

"There were some employees laid off about two or three weeks ago," Mr.

Lockwood said. "We've got different things in the works right now. I could tell you one thing and the next week it could be something different."

"We have different trials we're looking at and if they work out we may keep more employees."

While the plant regularly employs about 125 people, the recession has brought that figure down to about 70 or 80.

Although he declined to specify what kind of "trials" the plant was considering, Mr. Lockwood said Abitibi was looking at new products for the plant's operation.

Periodic layoffs and re-hirings have taken place at the 77-year old plant since July, 1981, when Abitibi officials, union reps and managers forecast that the plant's closure was "inevitable".
