ROBERT MILLER
 Robert Miller, 82, is still proud to call himself a resident of Silvercreek. Few know that the intersection of Highway 7 and Trafalgar Road North (the cutoff for Ballinford) and the cluster of houses around it is historically known as Silvercreek. Mr. Miller is only recently retired from working the family farm in the area. He lives in a small, well-kept bungalow about a half mile south of the Silvercreek intersection. The Miller brothers took over the milking shorthorn operation in the late-1930s, after their father died. In 1940, Mr. Miller recalled, they bought their first farm tractor, "a little Ford from Acton" with a two-furrow plow. Without a great deal of equipment, the Miller brothers worked 170 acres of mixed grain and woodlot on which they raised their milking shorthorns and grew award-winning wheat. Today, Mr. Miller laments the fact that one of the problems with modern farming is that so much capital is tied up in equipment some of which is only used a short time each year. The struggle to maintain a farm is more difficult than when he and his brothers sold milk and cream.
