

Rock 'n roll fest

They look caged in, but the Grotty Beats actually have more room to maneuver on stage. They were one of the Toronto-based groups that entertained at Acton's rock and roll fest.

Bo Diddley got one of the largest responses from the crowd for his amiable ways on-stage. The legendary rock and roll star excited the audience with his rendition of old favorites.

Some like it hot. The lead singer of the group the Backbeats may have looked cool, but the sweltering heat at Saturday's rock and roll concert in Acton probably made him wish he could cool off in Fairy Lake between songs.

Long John Baldry was one of the old time favorites appearing at the Acton Rock Fest over the weekend. The concert was held to try and raise money to send two hockey teams to Europe.

The best view in the house wasn't available to the paying customers. Technicians working the sound and light systems for the performers at the

The easy-going atmosphere at Prospect Park's rock and roll festival offered many the chance to catch a few winks between sets.

Like any country festival, Acton's rock and roll fest brought out the dancers and enthusiastic well-wishers.

Naval upbringing for Frank

By ROBIN BAKWELL
Herald Special

Having a father as a naval engineer, relatives in England that were all boat builders and growing up in Bermuda is bound to have an effect on someone. For Frank Black it led to an artistic career in which he has painted many a seascape.

Mr. Black has been in Georgetown since 1953 and didn't think seascapes would be a big seller up here. "I was surprised how many people, particularly men, like seascapes," he said.

Although Mr. Black has always pursued the fine arts he has worked as a commercial artist. "You do get some nice jobs, but everything is a rush in that business," he said.

Mr. Black has worked for various trade magazines, has created a Salada Tea carton and has also worked for the Toronto Star during his career. "They kept you busy at the Star and I was employed 24 hours a day," he said.

During his schooling in Bermuda Mr. Black was constantly getting in trouble with the teacher for filling his copy book up with drawings. In his spare time there he would go to the coast and paint seascapes.

To create his art Mr. Black uses oils, water-colors, pastels or linoblocks which are a type of wooden plate in which the scene is transferred from a canvas. The pastels Mr. Black uses run between $2 to $3 each because the cheaper ones have a gritty respect to them, he said.
