

Political families

Household likes business, politics

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the following articles, Herald reporter Robin Bakewell profiled the families of the three main candidates in the riding of Halton.

Liberal candidate in the Halton riding, Oriana Currie, has three children who all reside in Campbellville and are, or have been, involved with the family business at one time.

The family business deals in video and pinball machines and involves everything but manufacturing the games.

the University of Toronto with a general B.A., Bunny has, until recently, been working in Toronto with a night club chair as an assistant manager.

Bunny enjoys reading and writing and has taken an astrology course at Seneca College as a matter of personal interest.

"I've been studying the stars to see who will win the election, but Nothing has changed that drastically in Bunny's life now her mother is campaigning though Bunny tends to stay around the home and help out in her mother's absence.

Charles, 26, is a graduate from the University of Toronto in political science and also studied financial accounting and business administration at Wilfred Laurier.

He is presently into the real estate field in which he builds log cabins for customers. What started as more of a cottage type building has now got the public interested in them as a first home. With the mortgage rates starting family business and feels if his mother is elected he may be needed again at that time.

Calling himself a "political freak" Charles said he likes to put his two cents in when it comes to discussions of politics and strategies. He thinks his mother's involvement with politics is great and loves the campaigning.

The biggest response he gets from his mother's campaigning is from people he meets from out of town who somehow make the connection between himself and his mother.

Dave, 25, graduated from Humber College in electronics and although he spends most of his time playing guitar in a band called Parts Found in Sea, he is very active in the family business.

His band has already released one record and is working on a recording which is due out in early September.

Dave said his involvement with the campaign is in the form of "poster man. That's something I do all the time with the band anyway," he said. Stating that his mother had always had political interests and ideas, (although not as intense as they are now), Dave doesn't believe things have changed since the campaigning has started.

She met her husband at the roller rink

Janice Flynn, wife of Halton NDP candidate Kevin Flynn, believes that it is not a good time for an election on a personal level, but, is a good time on a professional level.

The problem is that the Flynn's are in the midst of moving from one part of Halton to another and the majority of their personal belongings are packed away in brown boxes waiting for this Friday's move.

Regardless, Mrs. Flynn said, "if he's happy, I'm happy."

The Flynn's met each other eleven years ago when Janice introduced herself at the Terrace Roller Rink. Three years later they were married and now have a four year old son, Nigel. Oddly enough neither have been back to a roller rink since.

"Kevin hates it," Mrs. Flynn said.

Mrs. Flynn is presently working in Sheridan College as the administrative assistant to the Dean of Instructional and Student Services where she has been for five years.

Although Mrs. Flynn is helping in the campaign anyway she can at the moment, stating they just had a sign making blitz, she is hoping to be canvassing with Mr. Flynn after the move has taken place.

Mrs. Flynn said she is used to her husband being very busy because of his involvement in taking wedding pictures, a partnership in a lawn spraying company, and as being an active member of the
