

In Ballinafad Dance centre for children

By ANI PEDERIAN
Herald Staff
If you're starting to feel grumpy because everybody's talking about "back-to-school" days, relax. September is also the start of fun things like dance classes.

TINA WATLING
In Ballinafad, a new dance centre is opening up called the Tina Watling Dance Centre. It offers classes for children three and a half up to adults.

teacher, planning to teach? She'll be offering instruction in tap, minidance and jazz.

Minidance is simple dance steps, mime, music and song and is designed for those three and a half to five years old. The development of good deportment is begun here.

Jazz students must be six years old. A popular dance form in North America, jazz requires physical stamina and energy.

For tap, concentration and discipline are required. Students must be at least five years old for classes at the Dance Centre. Ms. Watling believes tap encourages a sense of rhythm and helps develop good physical co-ordination.

All students are taught exam material based on the syllabus of the Canadian Dance Teachers Association and/or the British Association of Teachers of Dance.

As well, there'll be two performances students will put on each year. One will be at Christmas and the other in June.

Nicholson-Gower July wedding bells

Herald Special
Saturday, July 28, 1984 was the date; St. George's Anglican Church was the place where Ruth Nicholson, daughter of Mr. Robert Nicholson of Quebec, and Mrs. Dorothy Nicholson, daughter of Mr. Robert Nicholson of Quebec, and Mrs. Dorothy Nicholson of Scarborough became the blushing bride of Kevin Gower, son of William and Sharon Gower of Georgetown.

Michael Henry of Acton, the groom's six year old cousin was the ring bearer, wearing a three-piece blue suit. The groom wore a three-piece light grey suit accented with a burgundy boutonniere and pocket silk.

The groom's best man was a long time friend, Peter Allen of Georgetown. The ushers were the groom's uncle Mark Henry of Acton and the bride's brother Doug Nicholson of Quebec.

It was a double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Peter Ralph, the service touching the hearts of all.

St. Alban's Church in Glen Williams hosted the reception of 85 guests. Guests included close family and friends mainly of Ontario and Quebec, except for one surprise from Vancouver, the groom's cousin Cindy Pennington.

A special event at the reception was the singing of a song to the bride, by the groom and best man, written by them, entitled "I'll Be There."

The couple are residing in Georgetown.

Corn roast
By KAY WILSON
Herald Correspondent
NORVAL - Pinegrove Community Club held their annual corn roast Monday August 11 at the Community Centre. An iron kettle hung over an open fire proved the centre of attention, and the warm summer evening added to the enjoyment of everyone.
Cobs of golden sweet corn was delicious, along with hot dogs, watermelon and coffee.
As well as sitting around the fire visiting, a sing song was led by Ruth Thompson, accompanied by Alan Harrop on the mouth organ.
Committee for the evening were the Harrops and Claude McLaughlin. The kettle and tripod were set up by Spence Wilson. Keith Webb moved a vote of thanks.
