

Green candidate ecology-minded

There may only be one week left before the election, but Green Party candidate Steven Kaasgaard's signs were to be up this week.

The Brampton-Georgetown candidate said he spent a day last week pulling out boards from Fletcher's Creek. "There are log jams and boards from the factories up the creek. We pulled those boards out and cleaned out the creek at the same time," Mr. Kaasgaard said.

Water-logged, the boards needed to be dried out before they could be used, and so they lay out to dry for a week under a tarp in Mr. Kaasgaard's back yard. On the weekend, Mr. Kaasgaard and his supporters worked on making the Green Party signs for distribution around the riding. Last week, the party held an awareness meeting for the people in Brampton-Georgetown. Mr. Kaasgaard said about 20 people showed up to learn about the Green Party. "A few were converted," Mr. Kaasgaard said. "There were a lot of good questions especially on proportional representation."

Job hunters in Acton

If you're unemployed in Acton and want a place to go for support and a willing ear, a new group called North Halton Job Hunter's Club may be able to help.

The club began when Chris Emberson, 30, an unemployed chemical engineer and his wife Marta, 28, approached their Anglican pastor Rev. Art Tribe.

Mr. Emberson wanted to form a self-help group so that fellow unemployed members of the community could share ideas for finding work and discuss resources available to them.

Carol Clark of Acton Social Services and Information Centre has lent her support and she is the contact person for new members who want to join. The number is 853-3310.

Rev. Tribe has offered the basement of St. Alban's Church for the meetings.
