

IN THE HILLS

Jail term for referee assault

As a result of assaulting a referee during an Acton ball hockey game in July a Guelph man has been sentenced to 30 days in jail and put on 12 months probation.

Fred Kentner, 26, of Pipe Street, Guelph, pleaded guilty to knocking referee Ray Pusma backwards onto some steps after he received a match penalty for slashing him on the shins at a face-off.

A fine of $100 was also imposed as a result of not appearing for a court date in October.

Jaycees ponder Winterfest

To go, or not to go, that's the question. The Georgetown Jaycees are pondering whether to continue on with their annual Winterfest carnival in February.

For a number of years the service club has been organizing winter events for a weekend of frolicking in the snow at Fairgrounds Park.

However, the club is having trouble co-ordinating both the annual spring Crazy Boat Race plus the winter carnival. There doesn't seem to be enough manpower to go around.

Jaycee president Bob Sullivan said he is still trying to organize the broomball tournament which he said everyone enjoys and turns out for.

Citing last year's ice conditions Mr. Sullivan said it would be preferable to hold the tournament in an indoor ice rink.

"Right now it's just a matter of getting the teams together and organizing it with the recreational department," he said.

A final decision on this year's Winterfest activities will be made Tuesday at a meeting of the Jaycees.

Jeep flips

A Limehouse teenager escaped with minimal injuries after the 1984 Jeep he was driving went out of control on an icy surface on 5 Line south of Highway 7, and flipped over striking a hydro pole.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $5,000 while about $200 damage was done to the hydro pole. Halton Hills Fire Department were called to the scene with their 'Jaws of Life' equipment in the Jan. 3 incident.

Sympathy extended

By WINIFRED SMITH

BALLINAFAD - Many of the residents, especially in the Silver Creek area will remember Mrs. William Taylor who, with her husband lived on the farm at the top of the hill. They later moved to Georgetown.

Mrs. Taylor passed away last week at the age of 99. She has resided in Peel Manor for the last few years. Mrs. Winifred Smith and daughter Doris Burt attended the funeral.

Road closure

A small portion of Wildwood Road is to be closed in order to create a joint access to lots in the K.M. Givran subdivision.

The roadway to be closed off is the east half of Lot 21 Concession 8.

Snowed in

Ploving the snow from the sidewalks and entrances to the town's public libraries isn't a job for the public works department.

"We don't do any snow clearing to public buildings other than these two here," Town engineer Bob Austin said, referring to the town offices and public works garage on Trafalgar Road.

He said that a number of years ago, town staff had plowed in Acton for safety reasons.

"We were in the area and the request had been made," Mr. Austin told Coun. Pam Sheldon who sits on the Library Board and had led the inquiry.

Temporary homes

A bylaw is being drafted to license trailers as temporary homes while a family's existing residence is undergoing repairs or improvements.

The bylaw charges a monthly license fee of $20, but doesn't apply to trailers on private land with council's consent under the Planning Act, or to trailers located on land already licensed as trailer camps.

Chauffeur on T.V.

Donn Reynolds is on TV. At least his car will be. If you look closely enough, the Brampton man can be seen on the television program called "The Edge" Thursday 8 p.m. on channel 11.

He's the owner of Reynolds' Limousine Service. He often takes Georgetown and Acton clients to Toronto's Lester B. Pearson Airport.

His 1974 Custom Stretch Silver Cadillac was apparently in demand for the Canadian film about the RCMP and their Russian counterparts, the KGB.

Fatal fall

However, after an inspector plus mining, mechanical and area engineers investigated the situation, there were a number of orders issued regarding the catwalks and conveyors in the plant.

The nature of the repairs include the replacement of rusted walkways, replacement of bent frame members which support the catwalks and the replacement of the toe boards on the catwalks.

Mr. Cohen said that after the accident occurred there was an inspector and mining engineer sent to the scene immediately.

From Oct. 19 till Nov. 29 the ministry's investigation continued and remedial action was being taken, Mr. Cohen said. A report on all catwalks and conveyors was conducted.

Uncommitted delegate admires individuals

By ANI FEDERIAN

There are still uncommitted Halton-Burlington delegates for the Progressive Conservative party's leadership convention at the end of this month.

Two of Georgetown's five elected delegates have yet to make up their minds about which of the four provincial leadership candidates they support.

Pam Sheldon told The Herald she's still uncommitted, although she's been reading a lot of literature put out by the candidates. She said she's met all the candidates but Larry Grossman so far.

"There've been lots of opportunities to hear them and get their points of view," Mrs. Johnston said. "I don't think there's that much difference amongst them."

Mr. Grossman, Dennis Timbrell, Frank Miller and Roy McMurtry are each trying to replace Bill Davis as premier. Of the four, Mrs. Johnston said that Mr. Grossman had the most distinct ideas about what he would like to do with the province, whereas the rest have been more general in their statements.

"Timbrell said at one meeting that he's anti-abortion. It took a fair amount of guts to say that," Mrs. Johnston said. "I do like a person that speaks his mind."

This isn't Mrs. Johnston's first time as delegate at a convention. She said she participated in the 1976 and 1971 leadership conventions.

Comparing them with the current convention, Mrs. Johnston said they were more exciting. There were eight or more people running for the position then, which made the contest much more exciting, she said.

"Personally, I don't think Miller is going to make it. Support is picking up for all the rest," she observed.

The other uncommitted candidate from the Georgetown area is town councillor Pam Sheldon.

"I'm undecided, but I'm getting awfully close to deciding," she laughed. "My feeling leans heavily towards Mr. Miller."

Mrs. Sheldon said his promotional team has done "a phenomenal job".

So far, she's met all but Larry Grossman,

Four candidates keep quiet

Herald Staff

Interest in the Jan. 24 to 28 Progressive Conservative Leadership campaign should be picking up soon.

Things have been pretty quiet over the holiday season, and the four candidates Dennis Timbrell, Larry Grossman, Roy McMurtry and Frank Miller have been keeping themselves low key, regional councillor Dave Whiting said.

"I haven't heard anybody even talking about it over coffee," he said.

Mr. Whiting said the candidates have been avoiding controversy and that's made it a pretty unexciting leadership race.

"They're safe right now where they are and they don't want to open themselves for any criticism," Mr. Whiting said. "You really can't criticize somebody for not having an exciting leadership race."

Part of the reason for the moderation is to keep the party united, and not make for any rifts with MPPs taking sides, he said.

"They have to come out of this with party unity. It's the safest road for them," Mr. Whiting said.

Town alters definition of second hand goods

Jewellery, watches, VCRs and binoculars are among the items currently being stolen in break-ins of rural area homes.

Halton regional police want to make sure these stolen goods don't end up for sale in second hand shops.

Responding to the police concern, the town is altering its definition of second hand goods and amending its bylaws governing second hand goods stores.

To the definition of second hand goods, the bylaw is including "used personal property". As well, the bylaw revisions require the shop to maintain a book describing second hand goods for sale.

The description is to include any identifying numbers, code or make and model, the name and address of each vendor and purchaser and the purchase price.

TOYS THAT HELP

Bruce Marshall and Elvin Cocking display some of the stuffed toys the Georgetown Volunteer Ambulance Service will be giving to children involved with accidents or illness. The toys have proven to be good "psychological bandages" for frightened youngsters and have been donated by Ganz Brothers Toys of Woodbridge.

and she's keeping her mind open to his leadership qualities before making up her mind.

"I think a lot of the delegates are looking for leadership qualities, which, very often, you can't define. Somebody has it or doesn't," Mrs. Sheldon said.

"I was at a luncheon yesterday to meet Mr. McMurtry. I found him a nice person to meet, very forthright and easy to talk to, but I didn't find he had that leadership quality. He doesn't make you feel wow, whereas when you meet Miller, Holy Cow, he really impresses you!" she said.

Although Mr. Miller appears to be leading in the polls, Mrs. Sheldon thinks it will be a close fight between him and Mr. Timbrell.

"I don't think there's any chance at all that it could be McMurtry, but Grossman could slip into second place," Mrs. Sheldon said.

Other uncommitted Halton-Burlington delegates are Monica Oswald of Milton.

Convention delegate for Halton Burlington, Ab Tennant of Georgetown, said he had noticed a lack of public interest in the upcoming election.

"It's a pretty hard thing when you have four candidates who are all cabinet ministers. They can't take a shot at anything that's been done because they were part of the Cabinet that did it," Mr. Tennant said.

"Had there been an outsider running for it, who hadn't been a cabinet minister, then you could have had some sparks flying."

Another Georgetown delegate, Bert Arnold said the candidates have been anything but quiet from his point of view.

"The electorate is small, 2,800 people. They're not going to spend money on TV ads to get to me. They'll send me literature," Mr. Arnold, a Georgetown lawyer said. He said he's been kept busy attending a number of functions organized to acquaint the delegates with the candidates.

Town councillor and fellow delegate Pam Sheldon said she's also been at a number of such events and said daily calls by supporters from the different camps wanting to know if she's made up her mind on a candidate, average three.

Acton day care sought

ACTON - Efforts are underway to set up a daycare facility for Acton residents in September. High school principal Kari Sury said a committee was set up last month to investigate the need for the facility and to work out ways to fund it and a suitable location for it.

Mr. Sury said the committee includes members from the regional social services department and agencies housed in the Acton social service centre.
