

Rebels down Loyola

The win puts Georgetown in a tie for third in league standings with White Oaks. The Rebels have qualified for the playoffs, but are trying to win the home court advantage.

This week is a tough one for Georgetown. They played Oakville-

Trafalgar Monday there, and are at Milton today Friday the team plays T.A. Blakelock at the Georgetown gym.

"We won't have any more games like this. It's nitty-gritty time," Looking said.

Lloyd Newman led the way with 14 points.

Hoop loss concerns midget coach Hewer

Georgetown midget Rebels received two losses for the price of one Wednesday.

The Rebels were defeated 44-32 by Loyola in an East Halton midget boys basketball league contest. The loss was even more costly to the Rebels because it counted for two games.

The reason was Loyola does not have a home court, and would have had to come back to Georgetown Friday. So rather than make the Friday trip, Loyola and Rebel coach Tom Hewer decided Wednesday's game would count for two.

"I saw two things out there tonight," Hewer said after the game. "First was the missed shots, which I've seen before."

"Second was the players had no desire, they had no fire. I've never seen that from this bunch before, and that is what scares me.

"We just didn't want it. It's been like that since the break," Hewer said.

The players had not played a league game for two weeks as the Georgetown students wrote their exams, and had a semester change during the two week period. Hewer's team took part in a tournament during that time and the result was the same. His team came up very flat.

With the loss, the Rebels' record drops to six wins against three losses for the year.

Dick Jamer was a one-man scoring machine for the Rebels, netting 24 of his team's 32 points in the game.
