Emissions are controllable region tells Ont. Hydro

By ANI PEDERIAN
Herald Staff
Ontario Hydro doesn't look favorably on the burning of municipal waste for electricity. In a document on minor transmission facilities, Hydro says burning waste "may result in undesirable emissions" and that there are no measures currently available to alleviate this problem. The document also says steam production for home heating is a better use of garbage.

with supply exceeding demand at certain times of the year. This makes it a relatively inefficient type of plant, she said. Regional planner Rasheed Mohammed called the Hydro report "very negative in its tone, it does not contain an objective evaluation of the technology and it contains inaccurate statements which compound the negative attitude towards E.F.W."

Mr. Mohammed said other methods currently used by Hydro to generate power could be described in a similarly negative way, depending on one's view of the burning of coal, the use of nuclear power and the flooding of lands for hydro power. Neither the Ministry of the Environment nor the Ministry of Energy have made any comments on this issue in their review.
