

Region renews transfer contract

Herald Special
Regional councillors renewed the agreement with Leferink Transfer Limited for the operation of the regional container and temporary transfer station on Georgetown's Armstrong Avenue last week.

The region is going to pay $4 for each visit by a private citizen to dump off residential garbage weighing 150 kilograms or less. The "no charge" service was used by 29,959 vehicles last year, and the region estimates it will be used by 30,000 in 1985.

It cost Halton $35,850 last year to dump that garbage at the Burlington landfill, and another $37,450 to handle and transport it down there.

The container facility has been operated by Leferink since 1981. The company has installed a small compactor to pack the maximum amount of garbage possible into transfer trailers which then transport it to the Burlington dump.

Councillors agreed to pay Leferink the same monthly rent of $50 and $110 tipping fee they paid in 1984 for the newspaper container on the site.

Scrap metal collected for recycling will go to a scrap metal dealer and Leferink will get $115 for each tonne dropped off.

It's estimated there'll be 14 drops of newspaper and 30 drops of scrap metal.

Operation of this temporary transfer and container station will cost Halton $129,900 this year.

Hydrants moved cost $2,000

Did you know that it costs $2,000 to change the location of a fire hydrant?

Most of this cost is for road and sidewalk restoration.

The maintenance of hydrants is a regional responsibility. When moving a hydrant is of mutual benefit to Halton and the applicant, regional staff recommend that one-third of the cost, or $650 be charged to the applicant.

The rest of the cost would come from the regional coffers.

This split will hopefully discourage applicants from making frivolous requests.

As well, where the move is not of mutual benefit, regional staff are recommending the full cost be charged to the applicant.

Kit on Peru

By ANI PEDERIAN
Herald Staff
A teaching kit called "Learning About Peru" has been prepared by former teacher Cheryl Lightowler of Georgetown.

The 76-page kit includes pictures Mrs. Lightowler took on a trip two years ago to Peru for the Georgetown YMCA.

She has compiled a list of films and suggested book titles on Peru. Her list also names libraries in the Toronto area where books in Spanish can be found.

There's a tape with the book, featuring Peruvian popular music, and a poster by the Red Cross of a child getting water.

Several Peruvian games and activities that teachers can undertake with their students are described.

The soft cover book and kit can be borrowed from the YMCA.
