Kinsmen raise $4,000 to aid CF children

Herald Staff
If you were planning a trip to Antigua, you missed a real bargain last Monday night. The Kinsmen and Kinette service club of Georgetown held a televised auction to raise funds for Cystic Fibrosis. After receiving over 1500 calls for bids ranging from a large pizza to a brand new Ford Escort, the Kinsmen collected about $4,000 from the community. Chairman of the project was Bob Malcolmson who was extremely pleased with the results. He had hoped for about $3,000 in sales. One of the bargains offered was a week in Antigua. The list price was $350 American dollars, but the final bid gave one lucky couple a vacation for $120 American. Another good bargain was a $190 BMX bike donated by North Halton Sports, but the selling price was only half of what it was worth. Most of the items went for 55-60 per cent of their value, with Blue Jay baseball tickets and smaller items like grocery store coupons selling close to the original value. The idea for the event was to raise money for CF and perhaps show more people what the disease was all about, Mr. Malcolmson said. Eight year old Sara Murray, the daughter of Anne Murray who has CF, was on for part of the program. There was also a half hour movie shown on the disease. The chairman was pleased at the support the club had received from the community and merchants and plans are underway to try the televised auction again on Halton Cable next year, he said.
