Georgetown's Cantante Singers performed a tribute to spring Sunday at the John Elliot Theatre. Dale Wood conducted and played piano for the show entitled "Songs of Spring."

The 1 1/2 hour concert before a packed house featured love songs, and cheery songs for springtime.

The choral group opened up doing a terrific job of the song, Memory. The group also added a lively spring atmosphere by singing two uplifting songs from the Broadway musical Annie, called, I Don't Need Anything But You, and It's The Hard-Knock Life.

The Cantante Singers did an excellent job of the song, Leaving On A Jet Plane and received a big reaction to the song from the movie, Flashdance called What A Feeling.

Although the choral group consists of many talented girls, the audience enjoyed solos from two of the talented individuals in the group.

Johanna Delroy did a fine job with Christopher Cross' hit, Sailing.

A new face in this year's choir displayed her talent on Sunday night as well. Julie deKleer did an excellent job performing the theme song from Mahogany entitled Do You Know Where You Are Going To?

There are a lot of new faces in the choir this year. Approximately 14 new girls have joined the Cantante Singers since January.

"No more pencils, no more books, no more teacher's dirty looks" from the song Are You Ready For The Summer was an appropriate song that the Cantante Singers closed the evening off with.

The group provided a lighthearted evening of entertainment for all attending.

Songs of Spring was the theme of the Cantante Singers show Sunday evening at the John Elliot Theatre. The concert featured a variety of songs, providing an evening of light entertainment for followers of the young choir. Dale Wood conducted and played piano for the show.
