

Raider goalie returns from tour

Jet lag heavy on Australia trip

By DAN RALPH
Herald Sports Editor
Had the opportunity presented itself, Georgetown Chrysler Raiders goalie Dave Tataryn might have fallen asleep on the job.

Tataryn played goal for the Teen Ranch team that toured Australia for the past 18 days. After having to fly for 26 hours, needless to say Tataryn wasn't as sharp as he would like to have been. "The jet lag is unbelievable," he said after returning home from the trip.

"We played our first game the day after we arrived, and after the first period had there been a cot on the ice, I would have gone to sleep."

Teen Ranch played a total of six exhibition games, and won each one. Tataryn said the Australian teams he faced weren't quite as good as the teams in Canada.

"They can skate as well, it's just when you put a stick in their hand that they slow down.

They're unsure about what to do.

"They need to work on the little things in technique like taking and giving a pass, getting a shot off more quickly. They want to get into the 'B' pool for the '88 Olympics, and I think that is a realistic goal."

Last year in the Winter Olympics, Australia competed in the "C" pool.

As well as playing exhibition games, the Teen Ranch members took part in 11 hockey clinics. Tataryn said the Australians were quite receptive.

"I think though someone should be instructing the keen Australians so they can instruct their own instead of having people coming in," Tataryn said.

However, not all the team's time was spent on hockey. There were visits where Teen Ranch players would discuss their faith in Christ as well as time to spend leisurely enjoying the sights of the continent down under.

Teen Ranch is a non-profit sectarian Christian organization.

Team members appeared on a talk show much like that of Johnny Carson's Tonight Show. As well, Australia's Wide World of Sports did a segment on the team.

Tataryn said the weather was quite nice. At least by Canadian standards.

"It was funny to see all the guys going out for a tan and finding out the natives were wearing coats in 23C weather. They thought it was cold."

"We went to Teen Ranch Australia and the horses had winter blankets on them. One thing that was different was seeing the trees not shedding their leaves, rather their bark. The trees there shed their bark during the winter. They're just starting their winter there."

The trip to Australia was Tataryn's first. However, the chance exists that it might not be his last.

"They asked me if I would go back and do a clinic for goaltenders," Tataryn said. "Also, Teen Ranch was thinking of going back there every two years, but they're looking now at making it an annual trip."

Making a trip down under wouldn't be complete of course without seeing both the kangaroo and koala bear. Tataryn had the opportunity of seeing both, and even brought his young son back a stuffed replica of a koala.

"He won't leave it alone," he said. NOTE: Georgetown's Jay Barwell also went on the trip.

"It's a long road to hoe in camp out West. Here you can see the light at the end of the tunnel and there isn't much likelihood of camp drudgery coming up when you can see the rewards. It's a long climb up the ladder when you start off in a lower position."

Yet Inglis does feel he has something to prove.

"I'm not bitter (about the trade) because that's the way it goes. But when you get a little of that 'See you later Inglis' you tend to be a little inspired," he said.

Five years as a professional football player is about the average stay in the sport. However offensive linemen have a tendency to play for 10 to 13 years. With five years under his belt Inglis feels his best years are yet to come.

"I felt I had my best year last year but I think I'm still approaching it (his peak). It's been a steady maturing process and I'm still building on it. It's been a good five years, and hopefully will be another good five years."

"But I'd like to go to the Grey Cup. Winning a championship like that would be a great feeling. If I were to get one of those, I'd be content."

Soccer

By ALEX TOUGH
Herald Special

'British' soccer has taken a hammering around the world after the utterly disgraceful scenes prior to the European Cup final between Liverpool, England and Juventus, Italy last week.

It is particularly galling for a Scot, Irishman or Welshman to be bracketed with the thugs who brazenly attacked their opposit 'fans' and caused such a tragedy. It is normal for these three races to be so bracketed when there is bad news. Only the English were involved and this should make the record clear.

Nevertheless, Glasgow Celtic and Rangers fans and others to a greater degree should not feel so smug or complacent. They, too, have been, and are guilty of violent behaviour. I pay attention to Celtic and Rangers as they have been among the worst behaved fans for years in the past - nowadays they are pretty well behaved in comparison with others, and pussycats in comparison with their English counterparts.

Inter County report. 1st Division results - Meteor White 2 Rangers 'A' 2, Villa 'A' 2 Meteor Blue 3, Butcher 2 Guelph 0. 2nd Division results - Milton 2 Rangers 'B' 3, P.A.C. 3 Villa 'B' 0, Mariners 4 Ajax 0.

The Mariners scored two in each half to run away with the two points from Ajax, who did not give up trying. It was Ajax youth against Mariners' experience and skill and the latter came out on top. Archie Tannock (2), Tim Davis and Steve Swinscoe were the scorers. John Schenk, Ajax 'keeper, had a superb match and prevented a few certain chances as did the woodwork on three occasions. Mariners are atop the division with P.A.C. each with 4 points from two games.

Meteor Blue are the surprise. 4 points from 3 games versus the White, which has a 1 point from 3 games is not the normal Meteor pattern. However, Butcher with a 100 per cent record lead the division.

This evening's line ups are - Blue v Rangers 'A', 7:00, Meadowglens; Varian v Ajax, 7:00, Dorsey; Mariners v Milton, 8:45, Cedarvale. In Acton, Villa 'A' v Butcher 7:00, McKenzie.

The Mid-Ontario Mosquito squad opened their league campaign in Grand Valley. An 11-0 result and 2 points was a satisfying outcome, and coach Doug Gray tried all sorts of combinations to keep the score down and his players could not help but put the ball in the net. The team does have a goalkeeping problem and Doug is on the look out for cover. The Bantams had a 5-2 win over Caledon in their first league match and turned in a creditable performance.

Frank Woodward's squad of girl bantams put in a power of good work and support for each other in their runaway win over Brampton, with only 10 players to dress for the occasion.

Georgetown Ladies 1 f 2 met in a make-up game and displayed no mean effort in an entertaining match. The whites were tending the blues on 2 Denn Pickett goals, in spite of a pulled leg muscle, to a Jackie Koeslag special, when I had to leave.

The manner and type of posts erected at the Dorsey & Neilson fields have left soccer officials in an angry mood. The officials judge that the additional posts constitute an additional injury hazard to players, game officials, club officials and other people attending games and will hold the town responsible for any injury to any soccer person. At the same time these posts are also placed in such a position as to constitute an infringement against the laws of the game. Approaches have been made to the town council and authorities to rectify the situation. Soccer does not have any objections to sharing facilities as long as fair play is used in equipment and no misuse of the facilities is experienced. Already soccer persons have removed beer bottles and cans, and other debris from the fields after football use. One set of goal nets were damaged whilst being moved from the 'end-zones'. As I have said before, there does seem to be one set of rules for soccer and another set for others. Also, as I have said before, most of you out there do not know, or are aware of the amount of work which goes on behind the scenes on behalf of soccer users.

The under 21 league is under way in town and looks to be doing quite well. Colin Wilde's team let him down last week by only showing up with six players to commence a game. Several fill ins, including ref Luc Bertrand, helped out in a close game with Jack White's team. (I did not know Luc was under 21). I believe that there may be room for a few more players and contact may be made through Colin or Jack.

Whilst on about player shortage, Acton Villa could do with some on the field assistance. Please give Carl Fiska or Fred Blain a call in Acton if you are looking for a game, in the Inter County on Wednesdays.

Finally, hope to see some of you at the Meteor club dance on Saturday evening at the Alcott Arena Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Georgetown Track Club

Saturday saw 11 Georgetown Track Club members travel to Streetsville to compete in the Bread and Honey 15 km road race.

In the aftermath of the terrible storm Friday afternoon, Saturday morning arrived with a cool blustery wind to greet the runners. The strong wind was of little advantage to runners, but it hit them full force over the last five km of the race.

The race began in front of Streetsville High School at 8:30 a.m. and travelled a wide rectangular course. It was moderately hilly and covered mainly good roads. The race is extremely well organized. All runners received a running cap prior to the race, and more than enough calories to consume after. Each participant was awarded a frame certificate with finishing time and final placing as well. All in all it was a nice event. Here is how our track club did.

Bob Parker 58:35 Paul Burroughs 62:00 Mark Duncan 75:00
Joe Bray 59:28 Ib Olsen 62:57 Melanja Bray 75:26
Brian Markham 60:20 Tony Matthews 64:00 Ian Halliwell 60:37
Doo Mashinter 61:35 Cam Walbridge 69:40

Melanja Bray placed third in the ladies masters event. A special note here: The Brays went to St. Catharines Sunday to compete in their second race of the weekend. After Melanja's finish Saturday, she won her category in the Giro 10 km road race. This marks the second time a Georgetown Track Club member has won their event at the race. Two years ago Brendan Cleary won the 14 and under class. Congratulations to the Brays.

RUNNING SHORTS

Sunday is the running of the annual Mayor's Race here in Georgetown. Although the race is being sponsored by Joh Thompson and the recreation department, the Track Club will be heavily involved.

We will not only be assisting with registration desk activities marshalling and helping out at the finish line, but we will be providing a pancake breakfast for all runners also. The funds we raise from the breakfast will assist in paying team expenses for the Jasper to Banff relay.

Tonight a reporter from the Toronto Star will be meeting the relay runners at the high school to take some photos and do a story on our two teams.

Central Junior league decides against switch

By DAN RALPH
Herald Sports Editor
TORONTO—The Central Ontario Junior B Hockey League will operate this year with the same teams it did a season ago.

Officials from eight of the league's nine teams elected not to allow Mimico to go over to the Metro Junior B loop. Had the Braves been allowed to do so, Mississauga Torspo (formerly Port Credit Titans) would have transferred over to the Central league this year.

Georgetown Geminis general manager Bob

Webster offered a reason for not allowing Mimico and Mississauga to switch leagues.

"Mimico has been a credit to our league and we don't want to give them up for Port Credit (now Mississauga)," he said. "We're happy with what we've got."

Mississauga general manager Dave Innes said he was disappointed as the league's decision.

"I know we would have been stepping on Streetsville's toes, and that would have created some animosity. Really I can't blame them. They have a good thing going with Mimico but we could have had a good rivalry with three, four or five teams. That way everyone would have benefited."

Innes also said he will try again next year to gain entry into the Central league.

"If I thought we would have been rejected, I would have folded the team and applied under a new name."

Last year Port Credit finished last overall in the Metro league while Mimico was fourth in the Central league final standings. Innes said he knows the league rejected his application partly due to his team's dismal showing last year.

"We are an unproved commodity," he said. "However, I thought we could have finished in the top five (in the Central League)."

The league decided against allowing Wasago Beach into the Central League for the upcoming year. Distance was the main reason.

Lack of consistency hurts Eagles in baseball losses

By DAN RALPH
Herald Sports Editor
The scenario is becoming all too familiar for the Georgetown junior Eagles.

In both their Central Ontario Baseball Association league games this week, errors and giving up runs in bunches resulted in a 15-5 loss Saturday at home against Burlington and a 10-3 setback Sunday in Hamilton against Glambrook.

The Eagles have yet to record a win in their first four games of the year.

"It's getting a little discouraging," said Eagles manager Dan Guistini. "Sunday we were playing good ball up until the fifth inning when we committed four errors and they scored seven runs, six of which were unearned."

The scenario was almost acted to a tee the night before when the Eagles kept the game with Burlington close through the first four and one third innings. Pitcher Paul Guistini was performing well and the locals found themselves down only 2-0.

However, Guistini began to tire and Burlington managed to score 14 of their runs in their next four innings on seven Eagles' errors and four walks to put the game out of reach. Neil Sivertson pitched for one and two-thirds innings before giving way to Juan Mora for the final two innings of Saturday's game.

Guistini said his club has managed to score well with the number of hits it has been getting of late, but added the hits and production are going to have to increase.

"Saturday we scored five runs on seven hits which is good, but we are not getting enough people on base. We're not challenging the pitchers. Instead we're going after the first pitch and grounding out rather than making them come to us.

DAN GUISTINI

"I would say it is all due to our inexperience. A lot of players are having a hard time adjusting to this type of pitching. It will take a lot of at bats to get used to the pitching. We're bound to improve," Guistini said.

Against Burlington Pat Brooker and Guistini went two for four while Jay Anderson, Brad Youman and Mike Lorito had singles. Youman had two runs batted in and the others were scored on overthrows.

In Hamilton, Guistini had two runs batted in while Sivertson had the other.

The locals are in Oakville tomorrow night.

MAYOR'S RACE HELPERS

It appears like the Seventh Annual Mayor's Race might have two young competitors, however seven-year-old Ellen Louise Matthews and her four-year-old sister Tanya are just showing the shirts for the race. Georgetown Track Club president Paul Burroughs joins Halton Hills Mayor Russ Miller in the photo with the two girls. The Track Club will be hosting a breakfast at Sunday's race, with the proceeds helping the club finance their trip out west for the Jasper to Banff Relay. Entry forms can be picked up at the Recreation and Parks department offices in Georgetown and Acton.

New hockey age requirement won't hurt Junior C Sabres

By DAN RALPH
Herald Sports Editor
ACTON—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's (CAHA) decision to extend the age requirements for its hockey divisions won't prove harmful to the Acton Junior C Sabres.

At its annual convention recently the CAHA decided it will let hockey players play in the division they did the season before by raising the age eligibility up a year. Hockey in Ontario is governed by the Ontario Hockey Association (OHA) but the OHA adopts any resolutions the CAHA passes was to pass.

That means those members of last year's Ed's In and Out Variety midget team can return and play another season. Without the new age rulings, 14 members of the team were going to be ineligible for minor hockey play. That was the chief reason a move was made for the Junior "C" franchise in Acton in the first place.

Sabres coach Steve Marshall told The Herald after a team executive meeting last week that a few of the midget players have expressed an interest of returning to their minor team. A big incentive for the return is that this year Acton will be hosting teams from Norway, and many of the players would like to be a part of the exchange.

"This lets us be more selective," Marshall said. "I don't think it will hurt us too much. We had five area players go to Fergus and play Junior C there and they have expressed an interest on playing here. As well three were three-Acton players playing 'AAA' juvenile in Guelph and they said they would be interested in playing at home," Marshall said.

If anything Marshall said the CAHA ruling will mean the Sabres will have to use all five import cards given to them by the Junior C League.

Marshall said he too agrees with the CAHA rule.

"A lot of the smaller towns were losing their players and the players were not getting the schooling. This was the main reason for it (rule change)."

"Also, it is good for the minor midget players because they have three years in which to work on being drafted in the junior A teams," he said.

Marshall also said it is possible for the Sabres to work something out with the Acton Minor Hockey Association (AMHA) by where the Junior C club would use midget carded players when they are needed."

The slowpitch tournament slated as a fundraising activity by the Sabres is finding difficulty in getting a ball diamond. There isn't any available time in Limehouse, and organizer Marshall is currently looking at available times in Acton and Eden Mills.

An inventory of equipment shows the club has 20 pairs of shin pads, 18 pairs of both shoulder and Elbow pads, 15 helmets and 15 pairs of gloves. However, only six pairs of pants with pads built in are available as well as just short shells. Quotes on equipment will be sought, and a recommendation on what is needed will be proposed at the next club meeting.

No presentations have been made in terms of a team logo. A prize of two season tickets will be presented to the winner. Drawings may be sent to 69 Kingham St., Acton, Ont., L7S 1S3. Deadline is July 1.

Dave Anderson will likely be one of the two team's assistant coaches. Marshall said he was interested in the job. The executive asked for a written application for the next meeting.

Prices for tickets were discussed, but nothing was officially decided. A formal discussion and vote will be held again at the next executive meeting.

A few of the eligible Junior C players in Acton have expressed an interest in holding a golf tournament and dance on the team's behalf. The executive appointed Marshall and vice president Bruce Cargill to oversee the whole operation. The players will organize the whole event.

The next executive meeting won't be until June 29. The site will be the Acton Legion at 7:30 pm. The reason for waiting three weeks and holding off on deciding on a number of the items discussed was that the league meeting will be held June 15. The executive figured it was best they wait until final items were decided upon by the league before going ahead and deciding on those items for themselves.

The team formally accepted its budget. Treasurer John Rogers presented the $30,500 package to the executive. Included was a $3,500 allotment for sticks alone, which many executive members felt could be a source of savings for the team if they were able to spend less for them.

"We'll be called the Acton Angels," president Ed Thomson joked.

Eagles' shortstop Neil Sivertson is about to get a good cut at the ball, which is just arriving in the strike zone. Sivertson and his teammates took it on the chin this week as the Eagles dropped both their games. (Herald photo by Dan Ralph)
