Wednesday members of the Tot Lot summer recreation department program were treated to a behind the scenes look at how hamburgers, milkshakes and fries are made. Lucas Luttman, 3, seems happy to be a part of the hamburger making process. (Herald photo)

Even commercials can entice your tastes

By GRETCHEN DAY

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank all of the spouses of my students who have been forced to do any or all of the following: to stop the car abruptly to admire the shadow of a fire escape on a wall, to save a hornet's nest in order to study the unique building formation of the hive with its delicate colours of brown, purple, grey and gold, to face an orange, instead of a newspaper, in the morning, while the patterns of its pores are studied, to be asked to close your eyes and describe in detail the atmosphere at dawn. But, then again, word of mouth is the best advertising, and, maybe, the news of the wonderful world of nature will spread.

You know, even if you are a TV addict, you still can't escape nature's beauty and fascination. The very best commercials appeal to your senses to the point that, in the middle of a love scene, murder or golf game, you can no longer resist going to the fridge for a glass of milk or an orange!

The milk commercial entices you with the sight of a clean, white colour, the taste of richness, the touch of cool froth, the smell of freshness and purity and the sound of smooth thick liquid pouring into a cold glass - that is, of course, if the bag doesn't break!

The photographer who took the pictures for the Sunkist orange commercials deserves a prize. The artist was able to capture all of the senses of eating an orange in about thirty seconds.

The rough skin is ripped off the orange to expose perfectly shaped segments entwined with cubweb threads. A set of brilliant, white teeth sink deep into the sections, breaking the threads and causing the tiny crystals to explode into the air, shimmering and sweet, quenching the thirst with the delicate nectar.

Even the different hues of the colour orange are capitalized upon because they represent something exciting and dynamic.

You can almost taste the tingle on your tongue. Any craving for a fattening chocolate bar will be quenched by this commercial.

I am constantly amazed when my daughters who are 5 and 2 find triangular, square and circular shapes where one least expects. But, recently I purchased a book called "ABC - A Way of Seeing" by Arlene Alda (yes, wife of Alan), and discovered a lot of shapes I've been missing. This book is a photographic album illustrating where the letters of the alphabet can be found in a natural setting; for example, the letter J is seen in the hook of a coat hanger, the letter E can be found in the mortar between bricks.

This book is a definite purchase for young and older alike. As Mrs. Alda writes, "To see - as a child. That's what this book is all about."

Fifth line fencer gets grand farewell

BALLINAFAD - A happy gathering took place on Sunday afternoon Aug. 11 when Mr. and Mrs. Ward Hamilton of the Fifth Line in Erin Township, welcomed friends and neighbors to their spacious grounds and farm home.

The occasion was a farewell party and presentation. The guest of honor was Reginald Cooper, a close neighbor of the Hamiltons.

Most of the Fifth Line residents were present and also many from the Ballinafad area. Mr. Cooper was a fencer and was known for miles around for his skill and handwork in the art of building fences.

It was a beautiful day and the party was held on the lawn. Delicious food and cold drinks were set out on the picnic tables.

Around 5 p.m. a surprised Mr. Cooper was taken to his place of honor, a special chair surrounded by his friends.

Smith Griffen, a long time neighbor was called on to say a few words on behalf of those present.

The guest of honor was then given a befitting card with all his friends' names written down on it plus a gift of money.

Reg was somewhat overwhelmed by it all. He thanked everyone for the kindness shown.

Reverend welcomed back

BALLINAFAD - The congregation of Ballinafad Church welcomed back to the pulpit Rev. Tom Bandy after a four week absence.

Rev. Bandy said he didn't expect to be spending part of his vacation in hospital. However, he said it was the only place to get the skilled care and attention one needed when suffering pain.

He said he was much better and feeling quite fit again. We hope he has continued good health.

It was announced that the Sunday of the Labor Day weekend, church would be cancelled.

Park for rent

Due to a last minute cancellation Hornby Ball Diamonds are now available for the following 2 weekends: Aug. 16, 17, 18 and Aug. 23, 24, 25. Anyone interested contact Jeff Bliton at 877-5185 ext. 262.

Time for travels

BALLINAFAD - A recent visitor at the home of Floyd and Edna Shortill was Floyd's cousin, Elizabeth Heath from Monahan, Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Volmar have returned home after visiting relatives and friends in Denmark.
