

Norman Bird a farmer, teacher

Norman Bird found opportunity during his lifetime, to pursue two different careers - his teaching career served his love for education, and his farming career, his love for the land. He died, Feb. 17, at Georgetown District Memorial Hospital in his 87th year, following a brief illness.

Born before the turn of the century in Norval, he was the eldest son of Thomas and Sarah Bird. He received his early education in Chinguacousy and at Brampton high school and graduated from the University of Toronto to do post-graduate work and lecturing in biology while completing his M.A. degree.

Following a year at the Ontario College of Education, he joined the staff of Cornwall Collegiate where he taught science and agriculture for two years. Later he taught the same subjects at Scarborough Collegiate.

However, life and work connected with an agricultural college seemed to have greater challenge for him and after receiving his M.S.A., he joined the staff at Macdonald College at Ste Ann de Bellevue, where he later became assistant professor of Agronomy, a position he held until he retired.

Since working with crops and the land were still his main interest, he bought a farm and invested the latter part of his life in various farming endeavors. In the community, he supported the Georgetown Horticultural Society, in a position of secretary, for a number of years, receiving a life membership. He had joined the Masonic Lodge in Cornwall, and transferred to Georgetown Credit Lodge, where in later years he received his 50-year pin.

He devoted a great deal of time and interest toward projects of the Halton Federation of Agriculture, working in Halton Medical Services, Co-Operators Insurance, and the Interested Citizens Group conflict with Hydro. His associates made him a life member on his retirement.
