Annual parade

Santa shows his spirit in Georgetown

The grand man everyone was waiting for did not disappoint the children. As every year Santa was at the end of the parade, and he had many Christmas wishes for all. (Herald photo)

The woman on this float looks very much like Mrs. Claus. She did not identify herself as Mrs. Claus or ride with Santa. A rumor that she made her way from the North Pole was on the lips of many children. (Herald photo)

Guests from Hollywood included Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy. Assisting them while they were in Georgetown were Mark and Janet Rattenbury. (Herald photo)
