

Welcome to Outlook

By GARNET COWSILL
Publisher

Welcome to our new Halton Hills Outlook, The Herald's Friday edition.

When we published Halton Hills' first weekend extra edition in the early 1980s, it was an idea whose time had not yet come.

Now, however, with the change in marketing strategies since then, advertisers and readers alike have repeatedly asked for a second edition of The Herald. This first edition of Outlook is our reply to those requests.

In it, readers will find a plethora of light weekend reading combined with many marketing specials from our advertisers. Outlook has been designed with everyone in mind from our youngest readers to those with special interests.

It has been a rewarding challenge over the past few months here as Herald staffers prepared for our newest edition. We hope you enjoy our efforts as much as we have enjoyed designing and developing Outlook for you.

As always, should our readers or advertisers have any comments or suggestions about Outlook, they are most welcomed and appreciated.

Halton Hills Outlook

Reading can be entertaining and educational, but at Glen Williams Public School, reading is doing much more than that for students. A read-a-thon fund-raising event is being held and students are asking for sponsors to pledge money according to how many books they read. All profits will go to help fight Multiple Sclerosis. Seen here representing the different grades at Glen Williams are (from left) Catherine Mannall, Candia Shal, Tara Brooks, Rebecca Mollatt and Karen Mathison.
