Scouters get grants

A contingent of 500 Ontario youths and scout leaders recently travelled to Australia to attend the 1987 World Jamboree for scouts with the help of a Wintario Development Grant, John Eakins, Ontario Minister of Tourism and Recreation announced this week.

A grant of $112,500 was used to defray costs of two days of pre-camp, camp uniforms, equipment and travel to and from their departure point of Vancouver.

The event at the Cataract Scout Park near Sydney, Australia, provided an adventure for the youths in an atmosphere of fun, good fellowship, challenge and achievement.

The participants, who spent 12-18 months training for the trip, were given a chance to experience life in harmony with the environment and learn how to use lightweight camping and cooking gear.

Learn to hunt

Learn how to hunt safely and improve your hunting skills by signing up for Hunter Education and Firearms Safety Courses, now offered at Cold Creek Conservation Area, Bolton.

The course comprises four sessions - two weeknights, 7-10:30 p.m., and a weekend, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Ten sets of sessions are offered, from March 30 to mid-November. The fee is $55.

Persons 15 years of age and older must complete a hunter education course before they can obtain hunting licences in Ontario. The Cold Creek course covers a variety of subjects, including safe firearms and hunting practices, hunter ethics, bowhunting, first aid, ballistics, game laws, an on-range shooting session, and much more. The course teaches hunters to be safe and responsible sportsmen.

Last year, hunter education at Cold Creek was so popular that two additional courses had to be scheduled to handle the demand. Hunters interested in taking the course this year are advised to register early.

Cold Creek Conservation Area is located midway between Bolton and Nobleton, on Concession Road 11, north of the King Road.

For more information and registration for the Cold Creek Hunter Education and Firearms Safety Courses, call the Metro Region Conservation Authority, at (416) 661-6600, ext. 294.

Taxpayer services

In an effort to provide personal services to as many taxpayers as possible, Revenue Canada Taxation will establish approximately 200 temporary taxpayer-service locations in a number of Canadian communities for the 1987 filing season. Now in its third year, this program will make it easier for taxpayers to obtain forms and publications sometimes needed to file an income tax return, improve the flow of information across the country and provide direct over-the-counter service.

The Seasonal Taxation Assistance Centres (STACs), are intended to benefit the many Canadian taxpayers who live in or near small urban centres. They will supplement the services offered by the 36 permanent District Taxation Offices across the country. In the past, for taxpayers who lived or worked outside a city in which a tax office was located, assistance usually meant that their problem had to be dealt with by telephone, or in writing.

Staffed by experienced Revenue Canada Taxation employees, these temporary offices will provide direct over-the-counter service to tax filers completing and filing their income tax returns. They will also stock most commonly used departmental forms and publications for the benefit of local taxpayers.

Depending on the size of the community involved and local needs, the offices will operate from one day, to more than two months.
