M and M shows redeeming qualities

By MIKE TURNER
Herald Sports Editor

It may well be that the M and M Sports AA Bantams are looking at the Georgetown International Bantam Hockey Tournament as a chance to redeem themselves for what had been, up until last week, a disappointing season.

Whatever the case though, the local team has proven to be one of the pleasant surprises in the early going of the tournament, which got underway Saturday at the Alcott Arena.

After completing their regular hockey schedule with less than impressive numbers, M and M Sports came into the tournament and went undefeated in their first three games, to lock up first place in the four-team group and advance to the divisional playoffs.

Saturday morning, the locals romped to an easy 9-1 victory over West Hill, a team which was a late replacement for Agincourt.

Later in the day, M and M Sports fought back from a three-goal deficit late in the final period of a match with London Sabres, and earned a 4-4 draw.

Then Monday night, with first place in the division up for grabs, Georgetown totally dominated Guelph, taking an 11-5 decision.

M and M coach Bert Osborne says he wasn't really surprised in his team's turnaround.

"I've always believed the team was capable of playing this way," he said following the win Monday. "Things just didn't click for us during the season. This is the first time I've seen the guys pumped up like this."

The Bantam roster was bolstered by a couple of minor players, including Craig Cooper, Rod Pasma, and Jim English. Osborne says the three have worked their way into the line-up well, and have been a big asset.

The team has received solid leadership from Brent Presswood and Adam Bennet, and both have been putting the points on the board.

Presswood scored 10 goals in the three games, and added three assists, while Bennet has three goals and eight assists.

All three games for Georgetown were distinctly different in style.

They waltzed to the win over West Hill, had to play catch-up against London after digging themselves a hole early on, and against Guelph, the team had to play a physical game.

The M and M Sports Major Bantams made quite a comeback in their second game of the local tournament on the weekend as they scored three goals in the final four minutes of play to tie London 4-4. Here, Georgetown

Who the team will play in the divisional match-ups Friday remains to be seen. They could draw Milton, a team they haven't been able to beat all season.

But regardless of who it is, Osborne is looking forward to a good weekend of hockey.

"This is a whole new ball game," he says. "It's surprising what emotions can do for you. Who knows what can happen."

All Guelph needed to nail down the other playoff position in the division was a victory over West Hill Tuesday morning, which would eliminate both West Hill and London from further competition.

Earlier Monday, Guelph beat London 3-1 in another divisional match-up.

A summary of Georgetown's three games in the tournament follows.

West Hill 1

After spotting West Hill the first goal of the game, Georgetown roared back with three goals in the final minute and a half of the opening period.

The goals continued to come in bunches, as just 48 seconds separated a pair of markers in the middle frame to give M and M a commanding 5-1 lead.

Four goals in the last period for Georgetown rounded out the scoring, as they totally dominated the West Hill squad.

Brent Presswood led the scoring attack for Georgetown as he pumped in three goals and helped out on one other.

Adam Bennet was all over the ice, scoring twice and adding four assists.

Jim English, Steve Sutherland, Doug Kent, and Greg Onoprijenko accounted for the other Georgetown goals.
