POLLY'S POINTERS

How to measure extra-fine sugar

DEAR POLLY - Is extra-fine sugar equal in measurement to granulated sugar? - ROSE

DEAR ROSE - Extra-fine sugar is granulated sugar, although finer than ordinary granulated sugar. The measurement would be slightly different, and the most accurate way to measure the sugar would be by weight rather than volume. However, the difference would be so small that for practical purposes, you can measure the extra-fine sugar exactly the same way as ordinary granulated sugar. - POLLY

Scrambling for a fast eight

By James Jacoby

How should you play two spades? Don't look at the East and West cards - just count your sure winners. Here you have five top tricks. If you played the hand traditionally, you would hope for the black suits to divide reasonably. So you might win the heart ace, duck a low spade, ruff the heart return and duck a low club. Now, when the opponents continue hearts, you can shed diamond losers from your hand. Eventually you can win the diamond ace and play the spade ace and a spade. If spades are 3-3, you'll take three spade tricks, the two red aces, and then if clubs are also 3-3, three club tricks. Those are poor odds, needing both black suits to split.

A better approach is to play for just one suit dividing evenly, in this case the opponents' heart suit. If it splits 4-4, you can take eight tricks by placing yourself in the defenders' role. When you're a defender, you frequently try to take tricks by ruffing. In this instance you should scramble as many tricks as possible by ruffing with little trumps in your hand. So win the heart ace and ruff a heart, get back to dummy with the club king and try to ruff one more heart. If all that goes smoothly, cash the club ace and the spade ace and make your contract.

When you play this way, your trump losers and minor suit losers will fall together on the same tricks at the end of the deal. Much better than letting the defenders take them separately earlier.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharo Books.

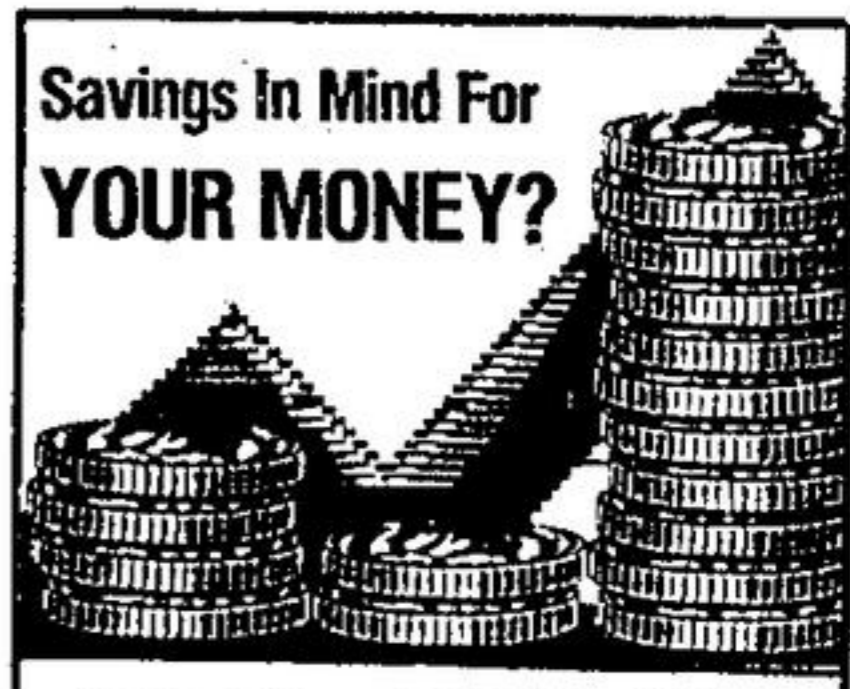

Flowers are back

By MARION STEIBERG
For the Federation of Ontario Naturalists.

There are flowers blooming at my back door. Yes, it is a southern exposure and they are hugging the brick wall. But it is the first of March and, though we have had considerable sun for two weeks, the average night-time temperature has been 7 to 10 degrees Centigrade. Yet, there they are, snowdrops, sturdy little white bells, hasking in the lengthening days. A dark patch like a sweet stain has appeared on the trunk of the maple just below a shallow slash. The sap is running and the tappers are the squirrels. Each year they make several gashes at places where branches enter the main trunk so that they can enjoy a sweet treat.

The woodlot is changing too. In the boggy area uphill from the swamp, mottled purple eruptions of the skunk cabbage are vigorously pushing aside last fall's debris. Members of the arum family, these enclose within these mottled purple and yellow hoods, or spathe, short, thick yellow spathe on which are parked many minute, prettily flowers. Most people seem to share my daughter's opinion of this first appearance of the skunk cabbage. "Gross," she said. But I feel my blood quaken at the sight of this first real growth of a new spring. Apparently, the spade is capable of raising the temperature inside the spathe enough to melt the snow. Let's hear it for the skunk cabbage! Its late spring it will be unrecognizable.
