

Horse park study to develop site

A study to look into the site and financial feasibility of a proposed horse park - Canada's first - was announced this week. The study will be funded by Ontario's Ministry of Tourism and Recreation as well as contributions from the corporate sector and individuals.

Marshall, Macklin Monaghan Limited, in co-operation with Peat Marwick and Partners and Quadrangle Architects will conduct the study for the Ontario Heritage Horse Park Corporation, a non-profit organization formed to develop and operate the park.

Plans for the proposed Horse Park were announced Sept. 16 at Scotsdale Farm, in Halton Hills, the proposed site of the new park. "This study is a big step forward for the Ontario Heritage Horse Park, and for the people of Canada," says Brian Hay, president of the Heritage Horse Park. "The Ontario Heritage Horse Park could be a multi-million dollar project that will attract tourist dollars to Canada," Mr. Hay adds.

The 540-acre farm, bequeathed to the people of Ontario by Stewart and Letty Bennett, is now operated by the Ontario Heritage Foundation.

Area residents, the equestrian community, all levels of government, and other interested parties will be contacted during the study for their views. The results of the study are expected this fall.

Those who want to catch a glimpse of the potential of a Horse Park are invited to take part in any of the six activities planned for this summer and fall starting May 31 with "Puttin' on the Dog", a show which features special dog trials, obedience displays and whippet races.

And the color, pomp and pageantry of the "Pageant of the Horse" returns to Scotsdale Farm September 13.
