Grade 4 students at local schools will be able to learn more about safety through the PAWS program, which is being conducted during the next several weeks. Instructing the course will be, from left, Lisa Powell, Sheila Macdonald, and Andrea Lockie.

Students receive PAWS for thought

Project PAWS (Public Awareness of Water Safety) has returned to Halton Hills! The program which promotes public awareness of water safety is beginning its fourth season of operation. PAWS is a combined effort presented by the Red Cross Society and the Halton Hills Recreation and Parks Department. In the past, the project team has visited Acton and Georgetown area public schools teaching safety skills for aquatic oriented activities. The program was presented to children in Kindergarten through Grade 8 and was well received by both teachers and students. The program has succeeded in educating children in such areas as safe boating procedures, general water safety and cold water survival.

This year PAWS has a new format. The PAWS team will visit students in Grade 4 to enforce water safety knowledge already acquired and to introduce the students to the Junior Resuscitation Award. This award teaches the basics of simple emergency treatment of choking or non-breathing victims. The team will also be available to community groups this year to give short seminars on topics ranging from backyard pool maintenance and safety to boating safety.

Project PAWS promises to be an exciting and informative program this summer. If you are interested in viewing a PAWS seminar please contact the PAWS Manager, Sheila Macdonald at 877-5186, ext. 276.
