

Carol and Tony carve out a successful business

After looking around for the best possible location, Tony and Carol Walraven decided to make their "steak" at butchering in Georgetown.

This husband-and-wife team have operated The Butcher Shop at 187 Guelph Street in Georgetown for about 1 1/2 years.

They have discovered, like many businesses in the Halton Hills area, that the best business is a family business.

Mr. Walraven, after working for about 10 years at Als Meats and Glenco Meats in Burlington, felt ready to move on to something of his own. With a supportive family and the right credentials, the Walravens made their move, and have never looked back since.

"Family business are great, because everybody has 100 per cent interest," Mr. Walraven said. His daughter Nancy, 15, helps out at the store on weekends.

"The first few months were the roughest," Mr. Walraven said, "because you have to make so many estimates and adjustments. Things have gone fairly smoothly".

Tony and Carol Walraven have operated The Butcher Shop for about 1 1/2 years, located on Guelph Street in Georgetown. Jack Butler, right, helps out at the store. The Walravens' store carries not only meats but cheese, breads, spices and canned goods.

Road work gets provincial funding

Two of the five road construction programs for which Halton Hills town council requested supplementary funding were approved by the Ministry of Transportation and Communications, council learned May 19.

Approved for funding to the tune of $247,000 was construction of Sideroad 17 west from the Sixth Line to the Fifth Line and work on the Sideroad 17-Fourth Line area.

Turned down by the Transportation Ministry were requests for funding for Phase Three reconstruction of Sideroad 17, the Glen Williams Bridge deck waterproofing and rehabilitation and the Tenth Line bank stabilization project in the area of Lot 25.

Council had previously allocated $20,250 for further work on Sideroad 17 and work will continue on the project utilizing any excess funds from the other projects.

Council also voted to approve $9,200 to pay for engineering expenses for the Main Street Bridge Deck rehabilitation project in Glen Williams. Some $10,000 of previously approved money for the project will remain shelved until full funding is approved.

Work will also continue on the Tenth Line Bank Stabilization project using $30,000 council had previously set aside.
