Legion ladies

The Ladies Auxiliary of The Royal Canadian Legion bus hop through the auxiliaries in the escarpment region has been cancelled. You may pick up your bus fare at the branch from the bar steward.
 Mary Franks, our entertainment chairperson is to be congratulated on the hard work and detail that went into organizing this trip for our benefit. The annual appreciation night given to the ladies by the branch will be held June 19 at 8 p.m. This is the evening following our last general meeting for the summer.
 I hear our friends from Plymouth treated our comrades with their usual generosity and the trip to Plymouth was a huge success enjoyed by all who went from Georgetown, to help our American cousins, celebrate their memorial weekend.
 Let me know of anyone that is in hospital or home recuperating and keep my phone number 877-4225 in mind throughout the summer. Mae Lawr is a very busy lady and you may not always find her at home to answer her phone.
 Be prepared at your meeting to volunteer to Trudy Paul or Mae Lawr for our coming Bazaar in November.

Pineview new north education facility

The Halton Board of Education approved a plan to relocate three administrative centres at a total cost of over $180,000.
 The North, East and West Education centres in Milton, Burlington and Oakville will be moved to different public schools for September 1987.
 The North Education Centre, currently in Milton Heights Public School will move to the Pineview School in Halton Hills. The renovations to Pineview will cost $59,800. Milton Heights will then be discarded as a public school.
 Board members questioned the proposal to move the West Education Centre into Burlington's Tecumseh School at a cost of $105,000. This figure is in sharp contrast to that quoted to move the East Education Centre - $16,000 - trustees said.
 "If $59,800 is enough money to give us a suitable work area for the north, why do we have to spend $105,000 for the West?" said Trustee Len Crossin.
 Business Services Superintendent Jerry Jenkins told the Board it is unfair to compare one school with another "because they are different."
 Vice-Chairman Pat Hillhouse supported the move because of what she called the "inadequacies" of the current centre. "The West Education Centre is not exactly the executive floor of the Toronto Dominion Centre," Mrs. Hillhouse said. "It has few of the amenities people expect in their daily lives."
 Another Oakville trustee Jim Clelland suggested the centre be moved to Lord Elgin High School, but Mr. Jenkins dismissed the idea as impractical.

For container station Still free garbage drop-off

Rural residents can continue to dump their garbage off free at Georgetown's public container station on Armstrong Avenue.
 Regional council overturned a recommendation by its planning and public works committee that responsibility for the container stations revert back to the municipalities and user fees be charged to offset operating costs. The committee had asked for a staff report on the feasibility of making these changes to the current system.
 The recommendation had been made by a Burlington councillor and carried at a meeting dominated by Burlington councillors.
 At last week's council meeting, Oakville Coun. Liz Behrens questioned whether there was an "ulterior motive" behind Burlington Coun. Walter Mulkeiwich's recommendation.
 She noted the container station in Burlington is on Regional property and seen as an integral part of the Regional landfill. If all the container stations—there's one in Oakville, Milton and Georgetown—were returned to their respective municipalities, the only one which wouldn't be would be the Burlington one because of its location.
 Oakville, Milton and Halton Hills taxpayers would then end up having to not only pay for their own container station, but also for the Burlington one, Coun. Behrens said.
 Coun. Mulkeiwich said the container stations were introduced as an interim measure until Halton had established a new Regional dump. He said that time is very near now.
 Container stations were set up so citizens wouldn't have to drive the long distance to the Burlington landfill to dispose of small loads of 150 kilograms or less of residential garbage.
 Halton operates the service with monies from tipping fees charged to commercial and industrial haulers. The other 48 per cent of the cost comes from the municipalities.
 Halton Hills Mayor Russ Miller observed that littering problems have improved since the container station was put into operation in 1979.
 "I get very few complaints now about littering on the roads," he said.
 The Mayor did not object to the undertaking of a study on whether container stations should remain after a new dump has been opened in the Region. However, he said the study should be done after a landfill has been established.
 Halton Hills Coun. Pam Sheldon said garbage is a Regional responsibility.

Power dance to raise funding

Councillor wants a nursing home run by the Region

By ANI PEDERIAN
 Herald Staff
 Halton Region should get out of the business of running a home for the aged, says a Burlington councillor.
 Last week, Coun. Walter Mulkeiwich suggested homes for the aged are out of keeping with the needs of today. Instead, the Region should set up a nursing home, he told council.
 Halton operates a home for the aged in Milton, called Halton Centennial Manor. It has 370 beds.
 The building is over 50 years old and badly in need of repairs to bring it up to fire code and safety standards. The Region has reports from consultants on how the Manor can be redeveloped.
 Last week, Regional council approved rebuilding of bedroom areas for residents to current standards; the hiring of an architectural firm to do preliminary drawings for the renovations; and investigation into development of a non-profit housing corporation; negotiations with the Ministry of Community and Social Services for redevelopment of the Manor.
 "It would be utopian to think we'd all stay young forever and continue as vigorous people able to stay at home," Burlington Coun. James Grieve said. "The fact of life is, that isn't the case."
 He said now is the time to start dealing seriously with the needs of seniors in Halton Region.
 Halton is looking at rebuilding the Manor to 345 beds, or to a smaller size with additional beds in other parts of the Region.
 Coming up with what is the best process for Halton will require long and arduous negotiations with the Ministry, Coun. Grieve said.
 He observed the fastest growing segment of Halton's population are the seniors.
 "We weren't ready when the demographics changed in our school system, and we're not going to be ready when the demographics change for seniors," Coun. Grieve warned. "We're at our infancy in trying to deal with seniors in Halton."
 Halton Hills Coun. Marilyn Serjeantson said she didn't want to see money spent on the existing Manor building, and preferred to see the property redeveloped. Halton still needs 345 beds for the elderly, and perhaps they should be spread throughout the Region, she said.
 Oakville Coun. John Graham said Halton should be looking at a more flexible facility for people who don't live in Milton.

No objection for Limehouse houses

Ian Duff will be able to go to a Niagara Escarpment Commission hearing later this month with the support of two levels of government.
 Last week, both Halton Hills council and Halton Regional council gave their approval to an application by J.C. Duff Limited to build two homes on land now designated Mineral Resource Extraction Area.
 Mr. Duff and his sister each want to build a home on 21.2 acres of land just west of Limehouse.
 Both councils approved the redesignation of this property from Mineral Resource Extraction Area to Escarpment Natural Area and Escarpment Protection Area.
 Halton Hills Coun. Rick Bonnette urged Regional council to overturn a decision against the Duff application made by Halton's planning and public works committee.
 He said a second dwelling should not have an adverse impact on the community, and said the Regional Official Plan is a policy that should be used as a guideline only.
 Halton Hills Coun. Pam Sheldon acknowledged the application is contrary to policy, but noted it is compatible to the area.
 "There's a great deal of interest in Halton Hills of enlarging the Limehouse boundaries, I believe," she said. The proposed homes aren't within the Limehouse rural cluster boundary, although they are close to it.
 Halton Hills Coun. Marilyn Serjeantson said if councillors feel there should be an exception made, they should say so, and not leave it to the Niagara Escarpment Commission, as Burlington Coun. Walter Mulkeiwich had suggested.
 "We'd like this to happen, because we think it's good for our community," she said.
 Halton Hills Mayor Russ Miller said the two homes wouldn't be going up on agricultural land so he had no objections to the application.
 "You have a certain amount of discretion," Regional Planning Director Rash Mohammed said. "If you want an applicant to have a lot, you can say so."
 He noted the final decision on the Duff application will be made by the provincial cabinet, after the NEC hearing, "and not by this council."
