Concern over complaints, mayor wants town report

Allegations levied against the town over poor workmanship by a developer have the mayor concerned.

Monday night, Mayor Russ Miller said he was made uncomfortable by the complaints of homeowners in the new Park Lane Estates homes on Gardiner Drive, Georgetown.

He asked town staff to prepare a report on the degree of inspection they undertake and are responsible for.

"It has been brought to my attention there are some unhappy homeowners over there," Mayor Miller said. "I sympathize with the homeowners."

Coun. Marilyn Serjeantson said she and other town councillors have also been aware of that, receiving complaints from homeowners over the past year.

With a major housing development slated for Georgetown South, now is the time to tighten up town requirements of builders and developers, she said, to try and avoid a similar situation.

Bannockburn try potluck

By EDITH MEDLAND
Herald Special

The Bannockburn Womens Institute gave special thanks to its members and friends who helped with the cancer drive in April by treating them to a delicious pot luck supper at the home of Ruth Linham.

Twelve members and seven willing helpers attended. Ruth thanked the ladies and told them how much we appreciate their help.

The roll call was "my most frightening experience". Isobel McDonald gave her report on the district annual. Donations were sent to two worthy causes. The entertainment was turned over to Isobel who with her friend Iva Peterson put on a musical with instruments and songs to the delight of the ladies.

Courtesies were given to Ruth and the meeting came to a close followed by a social half hour.
