

One last glimpse at GDHS reunion

A look back at the Georgetown District High School Centennial Reunion July 3-5. Many of those who attended will remember the 100 Years In Review musical at the John Elliott Theatre. Rave reviews were abound after the show's four performances. Audiences saw actors play teachers they had decades earlier with amazing accuracy. Here, the barbershop scene is in full swing. Kids have ideas for summer

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Most kids have very little trouble thinking up ways to enjoy their vacation time. But as the summer wears thin, so do ideas.

To prepare for those "I don't know what to do" days, the editors of Penny Power, a Consumer Reports for young people — with help from some 8-to-14-year-olds — have come up with a few ideas and products that may help you cope with your youngsters' doldrums.

Probably the best place to start is in the kitchen. It's easy to stock the refrigerator with store-bought frozen snacks, but your kids might have more fun and find the snacks — such as "Banaramas" — more enjoyable if they help you make them.

You'll need some bananas, finely chopped nuts, chocolate chips, butter, water and popsicle sticks or plastic forks.

Cut the peeled bananas into large chunks, insert a fork or stick, place them on a foil-covered cookie sheet, and freeze them for two hours.

Melt a handful or two of chocolate chips and a bit of butter together in a double boiler. Add a few tablespoons of water and stir until smooth. Dip the frozen bananas in the chocolate, sprinkle with nuts, and return the banana pops to the freezer on the aluminum-covered cookie sheet. They'll be fun to eat.

To counter the doldrums that can hit while on a trip, consider two pocket-sized gadgets that let kids take a closer look at things.

The Insect Inspector, $7.99, has a magnifying lens attached to a clear plastic holder. The lens makes things look three times bigger than normal — more than many regular magnifying glasses.

The Pocket Microscope, $12.99, looks like a flashlight and requires two AA batteries. It's 10 times more powerful than the Insect Inspector. Kids can use it to see fascinating details, such as the intricate construction of a fly's wing and the crystal shapes of sand and sugar, or they can take a close-up look at a magazine photo.

Some youngsters found the gadget hard to focus. But the trick is to hold The Pocket Microscope firmly on top of the object you are trying to magnify so that it touches the object. Both magnifiers should be available in toy or hobby stores.
