

In the spotlight

A number of wild and woolly looking groups took the stage for the Department of Recreation and Parks Department's Variety Night Thursday at Centennial School. Day Camp participants presented "air band" performances and it wasn't hard to tell who this group fashioned their show after. Who ya gonna call? (Herald photo)

Sympathy to family

NORVAL - Sympathy is extended to the family of Mrs. Frank (Winnie) Smith who passed away this week. Mrs. Smith reported the Ballinafad news for over 20 years to the Halton Hills Herald. She had been in ill health for the past few months and countless people missed her Ballinafad community news. Sincere sympathy is extended to her three daughters Mrs. Charles (Doris) Burt; Mrs. Ruth Burt and Mrs. Norman (Joyce) Swann, as well as her 12 grandchildren and 19 great grandchildren.

Hospice workers recognize needs of dying patients

EDITOR'S NOTE: This one of a series of articles The Herald has agreed to print about the United Way. Member agencies have been asked to write articles about their organization so that the public can better understand where the money that is donated is spent.

North Halton Hospice seeks to enhance the quality of life for those whose illness is in the terminal stages. It recognizes the special needs of the terminally ill and those close to them - physical, psychological, spiritual and practical.

North Halton Hospice functions within the existing health care system. Patients may be referred by nurses, doctors, family or may call us directly. In an initial visit the patient services coordinator who is a registered nurse meets with the patient or family to explain what Hospice can provide and to assess the needs of the patient and family. Then after conferring with the volunteer coordinator she will contact the volunteer best able to meet that families needs. The volunteer will become the primary contact for the family.

The volunteer has access and support of the other hospice members. If necessary a 2nd volunteer can be assigned. The patient services coordinator will maintain periodic contact with the family. She is aware of resources within the community which can benefit the family and patient.

She is available to arrange for hospital equipment, clarify insurance coverage and to make referrals for homemaking and nursing support if not already in place. There have been cases of patients discharged from Toronto hospitals without referrals to any of the community services they need to be able to manage at home.

Hospice volunteers are caring people who are carefully screened and undergo a training program to learn the special skills needed to work with patients and their families.

United Way

Volunteers provide visitation and support which may include some relief for the primary caretaker, babysitting, and occasional meal preparation. She may meet with the family to discuss their concern and above all she will be there and listen.

A training program for volunteers is organized and presented twice a year by our volunteer coordinator whose qualifications include a degree in psychology and sociology with emphasis on issues related to death and bereavement. In addition she provides continuing education throughout the year to the volunteers.

North Halton Hospice has information which is can make available to interested professionals on pain and symptom control, a vital area of hospice concern. It provides twice annual Public Forums and an annual seminar on related issues for health professionals.

Hospice can provide the support and information needed to enable the dying person to remain at home as long as possible, to provide some continuity during times when hospitalization is necessary and to provide follow-up bereavement support.

Fair contestant

NORVAL - Congratulations to Lynda Thompson of RR4 Georgetown, the Miss Brampton Fair Queen. She was one of the seven semi-finalists out of 114 fair queens from across Ontario who competed Aug. 19 for the title of Miss CNE. Lynda is the daughter of Roy and Heather Thompson of RR4 Georgetown.

Alberta resident wins Reid draw

By BETTYANNE WESTSTEAD Herald Staff
The grand prize in the summer draw at the Halton Hills Libraries, a Jack Reid water color has gone to a temporary resident at RR 3 Georgetown.

Drawn on the closing day of the Jack Reid exhibition at the gallery on Saturday, the winner is Sharyn Kruger whose address was given as the rural route. Mrs. Kruger was a summer visitor to the area last month and gave her brother-in-law's residence as her temporary location while actually, she currently resides in Morinville, near Edmonton, Alberta. Her husband is a pilot with the Canadian Armed Forces and Mrs. Kruger purchased her lottery ticket during a visit to the Library-Cultural Centre in late July.

The painting, entitled "Ontario Autumn" of a Peel County farm house in late fall will eventually serve as a permanent memento of the area as the winner moves with her family to the various air bases to which her husband is posted.

For the moment the water color will remain at the residence of Stan and Vivion Kruger on the 15th Sideroad but it likely will not remain there long since Stan is also a pilot, serving in senior management with Air Canada. Which of the brothers will be transporting the prize painting to the lucky winner will depend on their flying schedules.

Just a few days prior to the closing of the exhibition, Jack Reid and his wife revisited the Georgetown gallery for a final viewing, again expressing his great pleasure with the retrospective of his work which had been collected and hung by John Summer of The Gallery House Sol in Georgetown. Sponsors of the event, The Friends of the Halton Hills Libraries report the exhibition was among their most popular. Committee members are very pleased with the interest shown by both local residents and visitors from throughout the Halton-Peel area.

Proceeds from the lottery and sale of prints and paintings goes to provide the Acton and Georgetown libraries with additional funds for the purchase of books and library accessories as they are required.
