

Halton Hills Outlook

Volunteers needed for the fall season

With children going back to school and vacations over unfortunately, why not think about using some of your newly-found spare time to make a difference in your community? Volunteering benefits not only the people you help, but also you. If a return to the workforce is a possibility, but those job skills are rusty, refresh them by volunteering. Several local agencies need clerical help one half day a week.

If you prefer to help in a one-on-one situation, there are countless current opportunities to do so through the Distress Centre, Halton Helping Hands, North Halton Hospice, and the V.O.N.

Drivers are needed to transport patients, to take someone grocery shopping or to appointments, or to bring meals to shut-ins.

The Volunteer Bureau, a program of the Halton Social Planning Council, is waiting to hear from you at 877-3219.

The chance to socialize and make friends is afforded through committee work. The Ontario Heart and Stroke Foundation is forming a chapter in North Halton and needs volunteers. The Cancer Society has several openings in the campaign and public education areas.

Teaching others can be most rewarding. First aid instructors are needed by the Red Cross, and volunteers will receive the necessary training. The Children's Aid urgently needs leaders in Georgetown for their Mothers and Childrens group one morning a week. This is an ideal opportunity for former teachers.

Requests for volunteers far exceed the number of potential volunteers coming into our office. Help fill the gap. Your needs as a volunteer are important to us so let's discuss them.

Roller skating at the memorial arena in Georgetown Wednesday nights has grown in popularity by leaps and bounds ever since two disc jockeys volunteered their services, Scott MacLean and Byron Cannon, both 18, are seen here in their booth working to find the best mixture of music for their largely teen audience. The recreation department was going to close down the roller skating night this week, but by popular demand, the date has been extended until Sept. 23. Tonight, however, it's back to school special and youngsters can skate for half price. As many as 50 people have used the roller skating surface in a night, the DJs said. (Herald photo)
