ASK DICK KLEINER

Will Magnum return?

• Dear Dick: Can you tell me if on the last episode on "Magnum, P.I." with Tom Selleck, did Magnum die? If so, is he going to make any more shows? If not, why not? — K.H., Granby, Mo.

Dear K.H.: If he died, that is why he wouldn't be making any more shows. But the fact is, as you will learn when you watch the first episode of the new season in September, that he didn't really die after all. Just a little bit of the old TV trickery to keep you guessing all summer long.

• Dear Dick: In 1978, I heard that actor Frank Converse had been visiting his parents and fell asleep on the couch watching a football game and never woke up! Yet I swear it's his voice I hear on TV commercials and there were magazine ads for a men's fragrance with a model that looked just like Frank. Is he dead or alive? — S.C., Killeen, Texas.

Dear S.C.: Alive, alive-o! I don't know where that crazy story came from, but forget it. It never happened. Converse is still going strong and does a lot of commercials, stage work, TV and movies when he can get parts, such as in the 1983 movie "Spring Fever," with Susan Anton and Jessica Walter.
