Decoys

A thousand years ago, Indians made the first decoys to trick birds down to within arrow shot. They were made of bulrushes woven and twisted into duck shapes. This Indian invention was quickly adopted by North America's first white hunters. In the Old World, they used live birds to trap wild ones in a cage the Dutch called "ende kooi," which the English pronounced "decoy."

Tolton-Everett wed

Brenda Lynne Tolton married Scott Reid Everett July 11, 1987. The Georgetown natives are now living at the River Run townhouse complex.

Brenda is the daughter of Marg and Fred Tolton of Georgetown. The groom's parents are Arthur and Dorothy Everett.

The couple were married at Knox Presbyterian Church and later a reception was held at St. George's Anglican Church Hall. About 100 people attended the wedding. Brenda and Scott Everett spent their honeymoon in the Bahamas.

The matron of honour was the bride's sister Debbie Layton. The best man was a close friend of the groom, Peter Heissler.

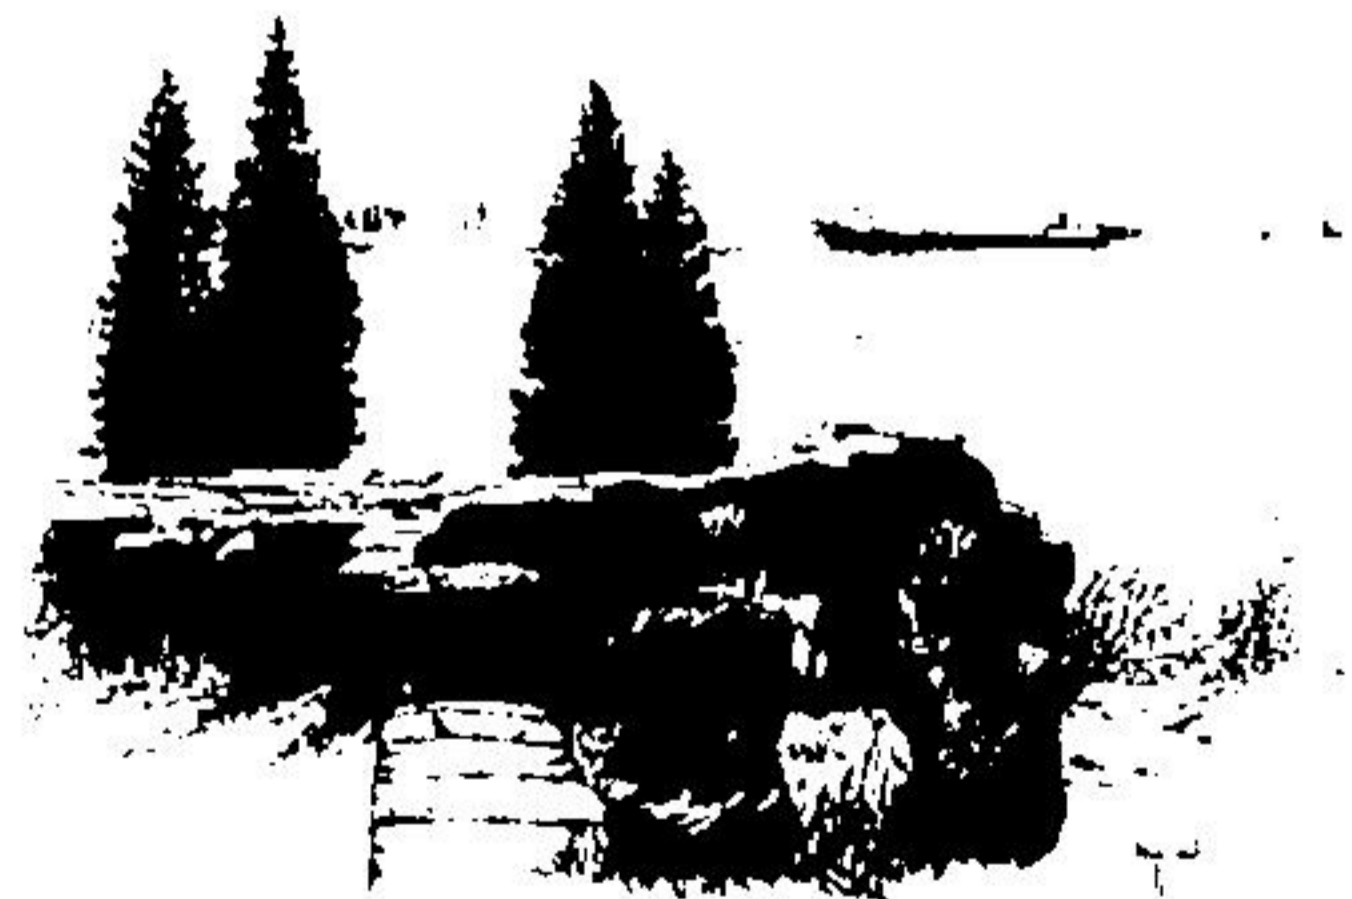

The bridesmaids wore teal gowns and the ushers wore white tuxedo jackets, black pants and teal cummerbunds. The bride purchased her satin and lace, pearl-decorated gown from Lorraine's in Guelph.

The bride's mother wore an ivory satin dress and the groom's mother wore a dress of dusty rose.

HERITAGE NOTES

Fort St. Joseph

Fort St. Joseph was built nearly 200 years ago to protect the great fur trade route in the strait connecting Lakes Superior and Huron.

It was the most isolated British military post on the continent. The fort contained a blockhouse, storehouses, a powder magazine, houses and a stone bake oven.

Although little remains of the original fort today, the waterway it defended is still a highway of commerce. Fort St. Joseph's stabilized ruins, now part of this national historic park, occupy a commanding site overlooking the shipping route of the Great Lakes.

For further information on Fort St. Joseph National Historic Park contact Environment Canada, Parks, 111 Water St. East, Cornwall, Ontario, K6H 6S9.
