Too long to wait

As if one big delay wasn't enough.

It was an unfortunate decision by the Ontario Hospital Appeals Board to postpone the Dr. Jack Ford hearing until Dec. 7.

It's another wait that puts a doctor, his patients, the hospital and the community on hold just a little while longer. Eight months to be exact. Eight months to the day when Dr. Ford's privileges were revoked at the Georgetown hospital.

It was bad enough when the appeals board couldn't fit in the hearing until October although papers were filed in the spring. This left dozens of expectant mothers without their regular obstetrician. The delay caused tensions to build and kept the two principals from telling the entire story about the revocation.

The appeal board should have been prepared for a longer hearing to begin with. No one should have been shocked when the chairman said it would take about seven days to finish the appeal. But what came as a surprise was that this was mentioned in October, not back in the spring, when the dates were being finalized.

Someone should have realized the case, where incidents are being reviewed from over three years ago, would require a long hearing. Splitting the case and having the appeal date delayed for 48 days does neither side any good.

It disjoints the process and leaves those patiently waiting for a decision in an emotional turmoil.

Eight months and counting. That's too long for an appeal when a doctor's practice is being threatened. That's too long to wait without knowing the truth.

Dips and swings

News from Halton Region keeps going from bad to worse. Who needs to check the latest stock market prices? We've got our roller coaster item with all the dips and swings to make a manic depressant out of almost anyone.

The story, of course, is again about garbage. It continues to pile up, counsellors continue to squabble and money disappears from our regional coffers.

What's new this week shouldn't make any of us sleep any better. One of the members of the consolidated board hearing has gone on to another job. The member resigned to seek employment elsewhere with the province, leaving the board with just two people. After costing the Region millions of dollars in studies and hearings, the province has allowed further discord by approving a transfer during such a crucial time. Hasn't the Region suffered enough? Halton doesn't deserve more trouble when the provincial body it must answer to doesn't seem to take the hearings with the same degree of seriousness. The news does get worse. In order to fulfill an agreement with Burlington, the garbage transfer site at Aldershot will be closed January although it is fully functional. The new garbage compacting centre, also to be built in Burlington, will cost us about $2.5 million more then if the Aldershot site was left operational and expanded. Taxpayers will be paying about $10 more next year for the Region to handle their garbage. Part of the reason for the big increase is because of decisions which ignore the most viable solution for more politically realistic alternatives. The Region's Chief Administrative Officer, John Fleming reminds us that our costs, as taxpayers, are really less than $1 per month.

That's still a lot to pay for the Region's woes.

A few little extras

Editor's notebook

By Dave Rowney

Okay, so now that we have ourselves a town complex ready for construction, what about the extras. The Town of Halton Hills has approved spending $6.1 million on the building. That includes, of course, carpeting. But what about the other extras.

Look what they forgot to include: -A retractable dome for the council chambers. It could double as a planetarium during off hours.

-A terrorist-proof wall protecting staff from car bombs or radical groups threatening to take hostages when the right decisions aren't made.

-A bomb shelter to house town council and their families with enough food to last for 30 days.

-A heliport and private helicopter for the mayor to be whisked away at a moment's notice for those important Toronto and Oakville meetings. -A most around the complex with peddle boats and swans.

-Ejection seats in the council chambers with engage buttons in the public gallery to get attention of their favorite councillor.

-An indoor track facility to keep the staff and administration in top shape plus Gold's Gym for the serious fitness buff.

-Gift shops and boutloues, luncheon restaurants. -A stress centre with full-time attendant on duty.

-An outdoor skating rink. -A cineplex theatre, an Imax pro--An extension of North Halton Golf

I haven't put a price list on these additional items, but costs are going to rise, anyway. Surely, somewhere they could be added under "miscellaneous expenses." Will anyone notice the difference?

budget."

Or, to cut through the jargon, the existing budget will have to be chopped by $350 million to keep spending down to $34.8 billion.

That's unlikely to happen. Not only does Nixon's track record show a consistent pattern of overspending - never once meeting his budgetary targets - but he now has more than $1 billion in Liberal campaign promises from the last provincial election that he has to meet.

True, not all of those commitments need to be met this fiscal year, but there will have to be at least token spending on some of them to show the Liberal are fulfilling campaign goals.

If Nixon actually holds spending this year to $35 billion, it will be some kind of minor miracle.

It is also true, mind you, that the New York bond houses (both Moody's and Standard and Poor's) are still generally pleased with the province's financial management.

Moody's continues to rate the province (and, by extension, Ontario Hydro) a Triple A candidate for borrowing, meaning the best possible interest rate should be given for provincial or Hydro bonds.
